Navy Asks Warship Conversion

Emphasis Put On Submarine, Polar Phases

Moves To Counter New Types Of War

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The Navy asked Congress today for $55,580,000 to convert 15 ships for new types of warfare with emphasis on submarine and Arctic operations.

The money would be spent over three years. Of the total, $5,030,000 would be used in the fiscal year starting this July 1. The Navy's request today was for authorization for the program, and not for the actual appropriations.

The program calls for the conversion of nine destroyers of the newest type into special anti-submarine vessels to be used in developing measures to counter a new type of underseas warfare envisioned by the Navy. Details of the operations they would be designed to counter and of their proposed new equipment are secret.

"Arctic Picket Boat"

It was learned at the Navy Department, however, that they would have all anti-submarine devices developed during World War II plus some new ones, and that the Navy plans to operate them as a group in developing anti-submarine tactics.

They apparently would be designed to cope with high-speed, long-ranging submarines such as the Germans had developed toward the close of the war.

The program also calls for the conversion of:

Two submarines as underwater troop carriers.

One submarine as a cargo carrier.

One submarine as what a Navy official called an "Arctic picket boat." It would be capable of prowling through ice-filled waters on reconnaisance missions.

One speedy attack transport as a troop and cargo carrier for Arctic waters, equipped with icebreakers.

One LSD (landing ship, dock) for Arctic operations.

Underwater Transports

The submarines to be converted to cargo and troop carriers would embody all developments of World War II. The initial underwater transports probably will be outfitted to carry about 100 troops in addition to a submarine crew of 60.

The "Arctic picket," Navy officials said, would be used as "eyes and ears" to detect plane movements and for other functions of a secret nature.

The conversions of the surface vessels were officially described as needed "to fully explore the polar regions." These regions, particularly the Arctic, have assumed importance because they may be used as routes for piloted aircraft or guided missiles.

The LSD provides a good chassis on which to base changes to develop a ship that can force its way into ice-blocked waters carrying all types of boats and heavy construction cargo.

Snyder Says Announced Price Cuts "Encouraging"

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said today the price cuts announced since the administration began urging business to make reductions are "encouraging."

"I think they show a very definite trend that business is seriously considering the price situation and is trying to make appropriate cuts where possible," he told a news conference.

Snyder reiterated his opposition to tax cuts now, declaring that all the surplus income the government can amass throughout 1947 should be used for debt retirement.

CIO, AFL Reject Plans For Merger

Will Unite To Fight Union-Curbing Bills

WASHINGTON, May 2—(AP)—Merger of the AFL and CIO was set back indefinitely today as the two big labor groups disagreed on how it should be achieved.

But they agreed to fight together against the union-curbing bills in Congress.

"It is the unanimous opinion of the representatives of the CIO and AFL that organic unity should be established within the American labor movement," the committees of the AFL and CIO said in a joint statement concluding two days of conferences.

Each turned down the other's specific plan for bringing it about, however.

CIO's Proposal

The CIO plan called for a gradual approach toward a unified organization, prefaced by such steps as a joint drive against pending labor legislation, a "No raiding" pact to eliminate jurisdictional disputes and acceptance of the principle of industrial organization. An industrial union contains many types of workers. It contrasts with the craft union, which generally speaking is limited to one type. Historically, the AFL has been based on craft unions.

The AFL proposed that all CIO unions be brought into the federation at once "as they are now organized and with their full membership."

This would have meant bringing along the left wing groups in the CIO which the AFL has bitterly opposed in the past. It would have given to the CIO unions, which left the AFL a decade ago with John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers, reaffiliation rights on a pare with the miners. The CIO ahs 6,000,000 members.

"Jointure" Might Be Lewis Term

Lewis took his 600,000 UMW members back to the AFL in January 1946. He is a member of the five-man committee which represented the AFL.

The "jointure" should be completed before the AFL convention in San Francisco next October, the AFL said. It proposed that CIO unions should have "full privileged participation" in the convention through delegates from every CIO union.

The AFL proposition, quickly rejected by the CIO, was prepared in the UMW headquarters around the corner from the hotel where the merger sessions were held. Use of the word "jointure" hinted strongly of authorship by Lewis, who loves a rare term.

Six Bandits Flee Following Daring Baltimore Holdup

Clothing Firm Loses Payroll Of $24,602

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP) — Police today flashed an alarm for a gang of six bandits, armed with machine guns, who escaped in a 1947 maroon sedan with a $24,602 payroll after a mid-afternoon raid on a Baltimore clothing factory.

The daring holdup was carried out in the company's glass-enclosed pay office, in full view of some 200 factory workers.

While the gunmen were still in the building, employes called from factory windows, shouting the place was being robbed, but passers-by who heard them apparently thought it was a joke.

Others reported that their telephone calls to police were delayed because of the strike.

Getaway Car Is Found

The getaway car was found abandoned tonight at Lombard Street and Market Place, less than a mile from the scene of the holdup. There were unsubstantiated reports the bandits were seen later in another car.

Police said that five of the six bandits, wearing gray and red masks, entered the office of the Cohen, Goldman Clothing Manufacturing Company in Northeast Baltimore at 2:30 p. m., less than five minutes after an armored express car had delivered the payroll.

Three held light machine guns, a fourth flourished a sawed-off shotgun and the fifth was armed with a pistol as the gang herded five women employees into a corner and scooped up the payroll envelopes from a table, police said.

Tossing the money into a canvas zipper bag, the holdup men dashed outside and jumped into a sedan, where a sixth man was waiting at the wheel.

Car Roars Northward

The car roared northward toward the Baltimore outskirts as police cruisers converged on the area.

Gremlins Must Be Losing Stuff

NEW CASTLE, Del., May 2 (AP) — A TWA Constellation airliner, which hovered over the New Castle airport unable to lower its landing gear for nearly an hour, landed safely at 6.17 p. m. after the pilot managed to correct the difficulty.

The TWA operations office said the plane was not damaged and the occupants were uninjured.

Members of the crew were unavailable immediately for details of the stuck landing gear or how they got it working.

One of those on the ground watching the plane circle said it flew higher and higher before coming down for the landing.

In Washington, Tom Bell, TWA public relations officer, said the plane, the "Star of the Nile," radioed its plans about 5 p. m. (EST).

Bell said the nose wheel of the plane's landing gear was stuck about two-thirds of the way down, one rear wheel appeared down normal and the other "a shade off."

Only the five man crew was aboard the ship.

Senate Group To Quiz Marshall On Treaties

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today asked Secretary of State Marshall to tell it next week whether he sees any reason for United States delay on ratification of peace treaties with Italy, Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania.

Chairman Vandenberg (R-Mich) announced that Marshall and James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State, both will be recalled at a final hearing next week. Testimony of witnesses against action on the Italian treaty ended today.

Previously Marshall and Byrnes had urged speedy Senate approval of the treaties pointing out that they provide for the removal of occupation troops from the countries involved within 90 days thereafter.

Union Coercion Ban Is Written In Senate Bill

Amendment Adopted By Vote Of 60 To 28

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Mustering enough votes to override a presidential veto, the Senate today slapped a provision into its general labor bill forbidding union coercion of workers.

The amendment, sponsored by both Democrats and Republicans, was adopted by a roll-call vote of 60 to 28. This gave supporters one vote more than the two-thirds majority required to override a veto—provided the lineup remains the same on any veto test.

It was the first step in a move led by Sens. Taft (R-Ohio) and Ball (R-Minn.) to write into the bill several union restrictions disapproved by the Senate Labor Committee.

Sen. Hatch (D-N.M.) and Olin D. Johnston (D-S.C.) said that adding the amendment to the bill would increase the likelihood of a veto by President Truman.

Embraces "Basic Theory" Of Bill

But Taft said the provision embraces "the basic theory of the entire bill: To create an equality between employer and employe—to correct abuses where one party has an advantage over the other."

Forty-five Republicans joined 15 southern Democrats in support of the amendment. Against it were 25 Democrats and three Republicans—Sens. Aiken (Vt.), Morse (Ore.) and Langer (N.D.).

The amendment was sponsored by Sens. Ball, Byrd (D-Va.), George (D-Ga.) and Smith (R-N.J.).

It would make it an unfair labor practice for a union or its agents to "restrain or coerce" workers in exercising their right to choose a union and to bargain collectively through representatives they select.

If a union violated this prohibition, the National Labor Relations Board could issue a "cease and desist" order. If the order were ignored, the board could ask the courts to enforce it by a restraining edict.

Safeguard Workers' Rights

Ball said the provision would safeguard the rights of workers.

"There is no question," he said, "but that individual employes have been kicked around by unions and their leaders more than by employers."

Morse, fighting the amendment, said "coercion" of employes could involve four types: Physical violence, threats of violence, name calling, or the closed shop. He argued that the first three now are prohibited by local laws while the Senate bill would prohibit the closed shop.

"I don't want the National Labor Relations Board made police officer to censor employer or union propaganda," he said.

He contended employers would place "stooges" in unions to get them to bring coercion charges against union leaders "to slow up union organizational activities."

Miner Is Found Guilty In Lamphouse Slaying

WELCH, W. Va., May 2 (AP) — A McDowell Criminal Court jury today found Dave Boone, 49-year-old Raysal miner, guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of Wesley Perkins and recommended confinement in the state penitentiary at Moundsville.

The recommendation makes a life sentence mandatory under West Virginia statute.

Special Judge G. L. Counts deferred passing sentence until arguments are heard next week on a defense motion to set aside the verdict.

Perkins was shot twice with a pistol in the lamphouse of the Pond Creek Pocahontas mine at Raysal the night of February 2. He died almost instantly.

U.N. Steering Committee Votes To Bar Jews From Floor Debate

U. S. And Britain Win Stiff Fight, 11 To 0

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP) — The United States and Britain won a stiff fight tonight in the United Nations Assembly's Steering Committee to bar Jewish representatives from floor debate in the full 55-nation Assembly on Palestine.

The vote was 11 to 0, with Czechoslovakia, Poland and Russia abstaining.

The Assembly itself still must approve or reject the decision of the Steering Committee.

Czechoslovakia and Poland, backed by Russia, lost out in an attempt to invite the Jewish Agency for Palestine to appear before the Assembly and state its case.

Assembly To Hear Aleman

The vote on the Czech-Polish proposition was eight to three, with three abstentions. Canada, France, China, the United States, Britain, India, Egypt and Sweden voted against the Czech-Polish resolution; Russia, Czechoslovakia and Poland voted for it; Brazil, Honduras and Ecuador abstained.

The Steering Committee adjourned at 7:12 p. m. (EDT)

The United States, Britain and Russia agreed that the United Nations should hear Jewish views but they disagreed radically on how this should be done.

The Jewish Agency had no comment.

The assembly will meet at 11 a. m. (E.D.T.) tomorrow to hear an address by Miguel Aleman, president of Mexico.

Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, of Brazil, Assembly president, indicated that the delegates might work tomorrow, possibly debating the Steering Committee's action on Jewish representation.

The British and Americans contend principally that the Charter permits only sovereign states to appear on the floor.

Positions Of Big Three

The positions taken by the three great powers in debate in the Assembly's Steering Committee on Jewish representation in the Assembly deliberations were:

1. United States—Jewish Agency for Palestine should be permitted to present its views and the Assembly's 55-nation Political Committee should be the forum. The agency's expression should be limited to its views on the proposal for setting up a United Nations inquiry committee on Palestine.

2. Britain—Agreed with the United States but felt that the delegates should decide on how far the Political Committee could go in hearing the Jews.

3. Soviet Russia—Advocated hearing the Jewish side on the Assembly floor.

Baruch Advises Senate Group Not To Slash Taxes

Finance Committee Winds Up Hearings

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The Senate Finance Committee wound up its tax hearings today with advice from Bernard M. Baruch not to cut taxes "at all" and testimony from E. M. Voorhees, of United States Steel, that tax reduction would help business.

Hearings ended with committee members pretty well agreed that a cut will be approved but uncertain over the effective date.

Chairman Millikin (R-Colo) said that "the most important question" to be decided at a closed session of the committee next week is when to make the income tax reduction effective. The bill passed by the House would make the tax cuts retroactive to last January 1, but some senators favor starting them July 1 and others would defer them until next January 1.

Baruch Wrote Lucas

Baruch wrote Sen. Lucas (D-Ill), of the committee, that "until we know more of what our obligations are to be—national and international—I would not reduce taxes at all."

Lucas, who opposes an immediate tax cut, had written Baruch for his views. The financier and presidential advsier replied in a letter dated April 30 which was incorporated in the committee's record.

"By and large," Baruch wrote, "I feel we ought to cut our expenditures as much as we can, but not reduce taxes. I look upon this as notice to the world that we intend to hold whatever position we take, if we have to hold it alone.

"Nothing would be so effective as to see this country get back into production and commence to pay off its debt."

Position Remains Same

Baruch said his position is the same "that I took when the taxes

Gen. MacArthur Restores Rising Sun Flag To Japs

Symbolic Gift Goes With Constitution

TOKYO, Saturday, May 3 (AP)—The Japanese, given permission by Gen. MacArthur to raise their rising sun flag once more, observed the inauguration of their new constitution today by affectionately mobbing Emperor Hirohito.

Appearing for less than three minutes, the embarassed Emperor stole the show at formal ceremonies inaugurating the constitution which relegates him to a position as a "symbol of state."

As he left the stand in imperial plaza in a chilling rain and entered his official car, thousands of Japanese broke loose from restraining police ropes and encircled his car, shouting "Banzai."

Emperor Does Not Speak

The Emperor did not speak to the estimated 5,000 in the plaza nor issue an imperial rescript, as Japanese emperors have always done in the past on momentous occasions.

He simply walked from the official stand, got in his sedan, which drove through the almost solid wall of people to the gate of the nearby palace.

All the while a Japanese brass band, apparently following a formal program, played the American march "Stars and Stripes Forever."

The demonstration about the Emperor's car as he left broke up the constitutional rally.

MacArthur, as supreme commander of the occupation, restored the national flag in a letter to Premier Shigeru Hosida. He said it could be flown without restriction over the Imperial Palace, the Prime Minister's residence, the National Diet buildings and the Supreme Court, representing the three branches of the government.

Flag Had Been Displayed Rarely

Since the surrender, the flag has been displayed only on a few holidays and in certain restricted places, with specific permission of Allied headquarters required.

Remarking that the new constitution would inaugurate "a government erected on democratic principles by a free expression of the

Marshall Acts To Settle U.S.-Soviet Korean Issue

WASHINGTON, May 2—(AP)—Secretary of State Marshall acted tonight to iron out a major disagreement between the United States and Russia in advance of a new conference on the future of Korea.

And he indicataed that unless it is settled beforehand, the United States may not bother to go into new talks with the Soviets at Seoul on May 20, as tentatively arranged for at Moscow last month.

Marshall acted by means of a personal letter to Foreign Minister Molotov seeking an exact definition of terms "in order to avoid any future misunderstanding." The Secretary set forth his own understanding and asked Molotov for "an early confirmation that we are mutually agreed."

Long-Distance Workers Turn Down Proposal

Offer Becomes Basis For Ill. Settlement

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—A $4 a week maximum wage increase offer which long lines telephone workers had rejected became the basis for settlement tonight by another segment of the striking National Federation of Telephone Workers.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company had offered such a wage increase to workers in its long lines division but it met a flat turn-down.

But in Chicago, federal and state labor conciliators announced that a $4 weekly general wage increase was the basis for settlement of the strike involving the Illinois Bell Telephone System.

If ratified by the 15,000 workers involved in Illinois, the settlement there would be the first money agreement reached between the company and a National Federation of Telephone Workers union.

Announcement of the wage hike offer in the long lines division negotiations had been made late in the day by Peter J. Manno and William N. Margolis, federal conciliators. They had kept company and union representatives in almost continuous sessions since 11 a. m. this morning.

Negotiations Continue

But even after the union had rejected the company's $4 wage offer here, negotiations continued, with the atmosphere apparently relaxed a bit as a result of the cash proposal.

Meanwhile from San Francisco came word that the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, which covers five states in its operations, had offered wage increases ranging from $2 to $4 a week.

But union negotiations turned the offer down as "despicable and inadequate."

Word of the Chicago settlement brought no immediate comment from either union or company spokesmen here.

The American Union of Telephone Workers, representing some 20,000 long lines workers, in turning down the company's wage increase offer here, had insisted that the company should settle on the basis of a flat $6 increase across the board.

George S. Dring, assistant vice president of the A.T. and T., long lines department, was asked whether he thinks a wage settlement in the Long lines department would lead to a general settlement of the strike within a few days.

Dring replied:

"There has been a widespread opinion that a long lines settlement could influence the entire strike and perhaps provide a pattern for a general settlement. A year ago, when a telephone strike was narrowly averted, that is precisely what happened."

He explained, however, "that in no sense can I speak for the other companies. x x x Each Bell company is responsible for operations in its own territory."

Pattern Of Offer

Henry Mayer, attorney for the American Union of Telephone Workers, said the telephone company's offer, which the long lines union rejected, included an increase in the starting rate for long-distance operators and a maximum increase in the top wage rate as follows:

Boston, $2 and $4; Buffalo, N. Y., $4 and $4; Chicago, $2 and $4; Cincinnati, $3 and $3; Cleveland, $3 and $4; Detroit, $2 and $4; Kansas City, $3 and $4; Louisville, $2 and $3; Memphis, $2, and $3; New York, $4 and $4; Minneapolis, $2 and $3; Philadelphia, $3 and $3; Pittsburgh, $3 and $3; St. Louis, $3 and $3.

Mayer said the increases offered for plant workers generally followed a similar pattern, but was on a state basis and covered the entire country.

Wallace Blames Truman For Moscow "Failure"

CLEVELAND, May 2. (AP)—Henry A. Wallace said tonight the recent conference of Foreign Ministers at Moscow "ended in deadlock and failure," and that any hopes for its success "were shattered when President Truman announced his four hundred million dollar anti-Soviet crusade."

The former vice president and Cabinet member also asserted that Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich) and John Foster Dulles, a member of the American delegation to the Moscow conference, were "exploiting" an emergency in Europe "for the wrong ends."

Educator Says Learning To Drive Car Is Of More Value Than Latin

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP)—Caesar lost a war today, when the dean of education at the University of Maryland declared learning to drive a car might have more general educational value than Latin in the average secondary school.

Dr. Harold Benjamin, a former Latin teacher and a man after many a schoolboy's heart, put the Gallic conqueror in his place by warning educators against retaining a course just for its "academic sanctity."

"Too long Latin has been considered general education and driving a car as special or vocational training," he told a state-wide convention of high school principals.

"Exactly the reverse is true. Latin is useful only to those students whose needs and abilities require it, while driving a car is useful to everybody."

"The traditional academic program is based on supposed mind training, verbalization, memorization," he said, while the goal of American secondary education is a program fitted to the particular community's needs and the interests and abilities of its youth.

What happened to France after 1939 is a "devastating commentary on the inadequacy of the French lycee," which has been more or less imitated in school systems throughout the world, Dr. Benjamin said.

Both France and Japan, which imitated the French system, are now realizing the need for a real democratization of secondary education, he said.

The loss of potential human intellect through narrow programs fitted only to a few far outweighs the loss of goods and energies in both world wars, he declared.

Mammoth Parade And Queen's Ball Bring '47 Apple Festival To A Close

WINCHESTER, Va., May 2—(AP)—Riding high on a throne of gold and bronze attired in her regal robes of white satin as Queen Shenandoah XX, Miss Jean Cartwright Lane today led a mammoth parade which required two hours to pass the reviewing stand as the climax of the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival.

Rain clouds, which threatened throughout the day and sprinkled the thousands of spectators for the first 20 minutes of the parade, disappeared in mid-afternoon and there was hardly a wisp in the azure blue when the first of the 30 artistic floats reached the reviewing stand at Handley High School. Instead a warm sun beamed down to light brilliantly the foil and colors on the floats and put highlights in the hair of the queen, her princesses and hundreds of beautiful girls who rode on the floats.

Queen Shenandoah, a Vassar sophomore and daughter of Gov. and Mrs. William Preston Lane, of Maryland, smiled and waved as her float glided through streets decorated with flags and bunting in white and the pastel shades of green, pink and yellow and lined with thousands of her loyal subjects in this land of make believe.

Almost two score uniformed bands and drum and bugle corps played stirring music as the parade wound through the city's streets. This apple capital of 10,000, thronged with some 75,000 to 100,000 visitors, gave itself over to the carnival spirit.

The queen's ball at the Winchester Armory tonight officially brought the festival to a close.

Gremlins Must Be Losing Stuff

NEW CASTLE, Del., May 2 (AP) — A TWA Constellation airliner, which hovered over the New Castle airport unable to lower its landing gear for nearly an hour, landed safely at 6.17 p. m. after the pilot managed to correct the difficulty.

The TWA operations office said the plane was not damaged and the occupants were uninjured.

Members of the crew were unavailable immediately for details of the stuck landing gear or how they got it working.

One of those on the ground watching the plane circle said it flew higher and higher before coming down for the landing.

In Washington, Tom Bell, TWA public relations officer, said the plane, the "Star of the Nile," radioed its plans about 5 p. m. (EST).

Bell said the nose wheel of the plane's landing gear was stuck about two-thirds of the way down, one rear wheel appeared down normal and the other "a shade off."

Only the five man crew was aboard the ship.

Senate Group To Quiz Marshall On Treaties

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today asked Secretary of State Marshall to tell it next week whether he sees any reason for United States delay on ratification of peace treaties with Italy, Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania.

Chairman Vandenberg (R-Mich) announced that Marshall and James F. Byrnes, former Secretary of State, both will be recalled at a final hearing next week. Testimony of witnesses against action on the Italian treaty ended today.

Previously Marshall and Byrnes had urged speedy Senate approval of the treaties pointing out that they provide for the removal of occupation troops from the countries involved within 90 days thereafter.

Union Coercion Ban Is Written In Senate Bill

Amendment Adopted By Vote Of 60 To 28

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—Mustering enough votes to override a presidential veto, the Senate today slapped a provision into its general labor bill forbidding union coercion of workers.

The amendment, sponsored by both Democrats and Republicans, was adopted by a roll-call vote of 60 to 28. This gave supporters one vote more than the two-thirds majority required to override a veto—provided the lineup remains the same on any veto test.

It was the first step in a move led by Sens. Taft (R-Ohio) and Ball (R-Minn.) to write into the bill several union restrictions disapproved by the Senate Labor Committee.

Sen. Hatch (D-N.M.) and Olin D. Johnston (D-S.C.) said that adding the amendment to the bill would increase the likelihood of a veto by President Truman.

Embraces "Basic Theory" Of Bill

But Taft said the provision embraces "the basic theory of the entire bill: To create an equality between employer and employe—to correct abuses where one party has an advantage over the other."

Forty-five Republicans joined 15 southern Democrats in support of the amendment. Against it were 25 Democrats and three Republicans—Sens. Aiken (Vt.), Morse (Ore.) and Langer (N.D.).

The amendment was sponsored by Sens. Ball, Byrd (D-Va.), George (D-Ga.) and Smith (R-N.J.).

It would make it an unfair labor practice for a union or its agents to "restrain or coerce" workers in exercising their right to choose a union and to bargain collectively through representatives they select.

If a union violated this prohibition, the National Labor Relations Board could issue a "cease and desist" order. If the order were ignored, the board could ask the courts to enforce it by a restraining edict.

Safeguard Workers' Rights

Ball said the provision would safeguard the rights of workers.

"There is no question," he said, "but that individual employes have been kicked around by unions and their leaders more than by employers."

Morse, fighting the amendment, said "coercion" of employes could involve four types: Physical violence, threats of violence, name calling, or the closed shop. He argued that the first three now are prohibited by local laws while the Senate bill would prohibit the closed shop.

"I don't want the National Labor Relations Board made police officer to censor employer or union propaganda," he said.

He contended employers would place "stooges" in unions to get them to bring coercion charges against union leaders "to slow up union organizational activities."

Miner Is Found Guilty In Lamphouse Slaying

WELCH, W. Va., May 2 (AP) — A McDowell Criminal Court jury today found Dave Boone, 49-year-old Raysal miner, guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of Wesley Perkins and recommended confinement in the state penitentiary at Moundsville.

The recommendation makes a life sentence mandatory under West Virginia statute.

Special Judge G. L. Counts deferred passing sentence until arguments are heard next week on a defense motion to set aside the verdict.

Perkins was shot twice with a pistol in the lamphouse of the Pond Creek Pocahontas mine at Raysal the night of February 2. He died almost instantly.

U.N. Steering Committee Votes To Bar Jews From Floor Debate

U. S. And Britain Win Stiff Fight, 11 To 0

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP) — The United States and Britain won a stiff fight tonight in the United Nations Assembly's Steering Committee to bar Jewish representatives from floor debate in the full 55-nation Assembly on Palestine.

The vote was 11 to 0, with Czechoslovakia, Poland and Russia abstaining.

The Assembly itself still must approve or reject the decision of the Steering Committee.

Czechoslovakia and Poland, backed by Russia, lost out in an attempt to invite the Jewish Agency for Palestine to appear before the Assembly and state its case.

Assembly To Hear Aleman

The vote on the Czech-Polish proposition was eight to three, with three abstentions. Canada, France, China, the United States, Britain, India, Egypt and Sweden voted against the Czech-Polish resolution; Russia, Czechoslovakia and Poland voted for it; Brazil, Honduras and Ecuador abstained.

The Steering Committee adjourned at 7:12 p. m. (EDT)

The United States, Britain and Russia agreed that the United Nations should hear Jewish views but they disagreed radically on how this should be done.

The Jewish Agency had no comment.

The assembly will meet at 11 a. m. (E.D.T.) tomorrow to hear an address by Miguel Aleman, president of Mexico.

Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, of Brazil, Assembly president, indicated that the delegates might work tomorrow, possibly debating the Steering Committee's action on Jewish representation.

The British and Americans contend principally that the Charter permits only sovereign states to appear on the floor.

Positions Of Big Three

The positions taken by the three great powers in debate in the Assembly's Steering Committee on Jewish representation in the Assembly deliberations were:

1. United States—Jewish Agency for Palestine should be permitted to present its views and the Assembly's 55-nation Political Committee should be the forum. The agency's expression should be limited to its views on the proposal for setting up a United Nations inquiry committee on Palestine.

2. Britain—Agreed with the United States but felt that the delegates should decide on how far the Political Committee could go in hearing the Jews.

3. Soviet Russia—Advocated hearing the Jewish side on the Assembly floor.

Baruch Advises Senate Group Not To Slash Taxes

Finance Committee Winds Up Hearings

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—The Senate Finance Committee wound up its tax hearings today with advice from Bernard M. Baruch not to cut taxes "at all" and testimony from E. M. Voorhees, of United States Steel, that tax reduction would help business.

Hearings ended with committee members pretty well agreed that a cut will be approved but uncertain over the effective date.

Chairman Millikin (R-Colo) said that "the most important question" to be decided at a closed session of the committee next week is when to make the income tax reduction effective. The bill passed by the House would make the tax cuts retroactive to last January 1, but some senators favor starting them July 1 and others would defer them until next January 1.

Baruch Wrote Lucas

Baruch wrote Sen. Lucas (D-Ill), of the committee, that "until we know more of what our obligations are to be—national and international—I would not reduce taxes at all."

Lucas, who opposes an immediate tax cut, had written Baruch for his views. The financier and presidential advsier replied in a letter dated April 30 which was incorporated in the committee's record.

"By and large," Baruch wrote, "I feel we ought to cut our expenditures as much as we can, but not reduce taxes. I look upon this as notice to the world that we intend to hold whatever position we take, if we have to hold it alone.

"Nothing would be so effective as to see this country get back into production and commence to pay off its debt."

Position Remains Same

Baruch said his position is the same "that I took when the taxes

Gen. MacArthur Restores Rising Sun Flag To Japs

Symbolic Gift Goes With Constitution

TOKYO, Saturday, May 3 (AP)—The Japanese, given permission by Gen. MacArthur to raise their rising sun flag once more, observed the inauguration of their new constitution today by affectionately mobbing Emperor Hirohito.

Appearing for less than three minutes, the embarassed Emperor stole the show at formal ceremonies inaugurating the constitution which relegates him to a position as a "symbol of state."

As he left the stand in imperial plaza in a chilling rain and entered his official car, thousands of Japanese broke loose from restraining police ropes and encircled his car, shouting "Banzai."

Emperor Does Not Speak

The Emperor did not speak to the estimated 5,000 in the plaza nor issue an imperial rescript, as Japanese emperors have always done in the past on momentous occasions.

He simply walked from the official stand, got in his sedan, which drove through the almost solid wall of people to the gate of the nearby palace.

All the while a Japanese brass band, apparently following a formal program, played the American march "Stars and Stripes Forever."

The demonstration about the Emperor's car as he left broke up the constitutional rally.

MacArthur, as supreme commander of the occupation, restored the national flag in a letter to Premier Shigeru Hosida. He said it could be flown without restriction over the Imperial Palace, the Prime Minister's residence, the National Diet buildings and the Supreme Court, representing the three branches of the government.

Flag Had Been Displayed Rarely

Since the surrender, the flag has been displayed only on a few holidays and in certain restricted places, with specific permission of Allied headquarters required.

Remarking that the new constitution would inaugurate "a government erected on democratic principles by a free expression of the

Marshall Acts To Settle U.S.-Soviet Korean Issue

WASHINGTON, May 2—(AP)—Secretary of State Marshall acted tonight to iron out a major disagreement between the United States and Russia in advance of a new conference on the future of Korea.

And he indicataed that unless it is settled beforehand, the United States may not bother to go into new talks with the Soviets at Seoul on May 20, as tentatively arranged for at Moscow last month.

Marshall acted by means of a personal letter to Foreign Minister Molotov seeking an exact definition of terms "in order to avoid any future misunderstanding." The Secretary set forth his own understanding and asked Molotov for "an early confirmation that we are mutually agreed."

Wallace Blames Truman For Moscow "Failure"

CLEVELAND, May 2. (AP)—Henry A. Wallace said tonight the recent conference of Foreign Ministers at Moscow "ended in deadlock and failure," and that any hopes for its success "were shattered when President Truman announced his four hundred million dollar anti-Soviet crusade."

The former vice president and Cabinet member also asserted that Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich) and John Foster Dulles, a member of the American delegation to the Moscow conference, were "exploiting" an emergency in Europe "for the wrong ends."

Long-Distance Workers Turn Down Proposal

Offer Becomes Basis For Ill. Settlement

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP)—A $4 a week maximum wage increase offer which long lines telephone workers had rejected became the basis for settlement tonight by another segment of the striking National Federation of Telephone Workers.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company had offered such a wage increase to workers in its long lines division but it met a flat turn-down.

But in Chicago, federal and state labor conciliators announced that a $4 weekly general wage increase was the basis for settlement of the strike involving the Illinois Bell Telephone System.

If ratified by the 15,000 workers involved in Illinois, the settlement there would be the first money agreement reached between the company and a National Federation of Telephone Workers union.

Announcement of the wage hike offer in the long lines division negotiations had been made late in the day by Peter J. Manno and William N. Margolis, federal conciliators. They had kept company and union representatives in almost continuous sessions since 11 a. m. this morning.

Negotiations Continue

But even after the union had rejected the company's $4 wage offer here, negotiations continued, with the atmosphere apparently relaxed a bit as a result of the cash proposal.

Meanwhile from San Francisco came word that the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, which covers five states in its operations, had offered wage increases ranging from $2 to $4 a week.

But union negotiations turned the offer down as "despicable and inadequate."

Word of the Chicago settlement brought no immediate comment from either union or company spokesmen here.

The American Union of Telephone Workers, representing some 20,000 long lines workers, in turning down the company's wage increase offer here, had insisted that the company should settle on the basis of a flat $6 increase across the board.

George S. Dring, assistant vice president of the A.T. and T., long lines department, was asked whether he thinks a wage settlement in the Long lines department would lead to a general settlement of the strike within a few days.

Dring replied:

"There has been a widespread opinion that a long lines settlement could influence the entire strike and perhaps provide a pattern for a general settlement. A year ago, when a telephone strike was narrowly averted, that is precisely what happened."

He explained, however, "that in no sense can I speak for the other companies. x x x Each Bell company is responsible for operations in its own territory."

Pattern Of Offer

Henry Mayer, attorney for the American Union of Telephone Workers, said the telephone company's offer, which the long lines union rejected, included an increase in the starting rate for long-distance operators and a maximum increase in the top wage rate as follows:

Boston, $2 and $4; Buffalo, N. Y., $4 and $4; Chicago, $2 and $4; Cincinnati, $3 and $3; Cleveland, $3 and $4; Detroit, $2 and $4; Kansas City, $3 and $4; Louisville, $2 and $3; Memphis, $2, and $3; New York, $4 and $4; Minneapolis, $2 and $3; Philadelphia, $3 and $3; Pittsburgh, $3 and $3; St. Louis, $3 and $3.

Mayer said the increases offered for plant workers generally followed a similar pattern, but was on a state basis and covered the entire country.

Caesar Loses War

Educator Says Learning To Drive Car Is Of More Value Than Latin

BALTIMORE, May 2 (AP)—Caesar lost a war today, when the dean of education at the University of Maryland declared learning to drive a car might have more general educational value than Latin in the average secondary school.

Dr. Harold Benjamin, a former Latin teacher and a man after many a schoolboy's heart, put the Gallic conqueror in his place by warning educators against retaining a course just for its "academic sanctity."

"Too long Latin has been considered general education and driving a car as special or vocational training," he told a state-wide convention of high school principals.

"Exactly the reverse is true. Latin is useful only to those students whose needs and abilities require it, while driving a car is useful to everybody."

"The traditional academic program is based on supposed mind training, verbalization, memorization," he said, while the goal of American secondary education is a program fitted to the particular community's needs and the interests and abilities of its youth.

What happened to France after 1939 is a "devastating commentary on the inadequacy of the French lycee," which has been more or less imitated in school systems throughout the world, Dr. Benjamin said.

Both France and Japan, which imitated the French system, are now realizing the need for a real democratization of secondary education, he said.

The loss of potential human intellect through narrow programs fitted only to a few far outweighs the loss of goods and energies in both world wars, he declared.

Mammoth Parade And Queen's Ball Bring '47 Apple Festival To A Close

WINCHESTER, Va., May 2—(AP)—Riding high on a throne of gold and bronze attired in her regal robes of white satin as Queen Shenandoah XX, Miss Jean Cartwright Lane today led a mammoth parade which required two hours to pass the reviewing stand as the climax of the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival.

Rain clouds, which threatened throughout the day and sprinkled the thousands of spectators for the first 20 minutes of the parade, disappeared in mid-afternoon and there was hardly a wisp in the azure blue when the first of the 30 artistic floats reached the reviewing stand at Handley High School. Instead a warm sun beamed down to light brilliantly the foil and colors on the floats and put highlights in the hair of the queen, her princesses and hundreds of beautiful girls who rode on the floats.

Queen Shenandoah, a Vassar sophomore and daughter of Gov. and Mrs. William Preston Lane, of Maryland, smiled and waved as her float glided through streets decorated with flags and bunting in white and the pastel shades of green, pink and yellow and lined with thousands of her loyal subjects in this land of make believe.

Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of the Army Ground Forces, and grand marshal of the parade, occupied the reviewing stand with Queen Shenandoah, her princesses and distinguished guests.

Almost two score uniformed bands and drum and bugle corps played stirring music as the parade wound through the city's streets. This apple capital of 10,000, thronged with some 75,000 to 100,000 visitors, gave itself over to the carnival spirit.

The queen's ball at the Winchester Armory tonight officially brought the festival to a close.

National Guard Plans State-Wide Recruiting Drive

Two Local Units Need 150 Men

Plans are being made by the Maryland National Guard for an intensive recruiting campaign throughout the state, according to information received yesterday from Baltimore by Capt. Robert L. Powell, commander of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 115th Infantry Regiment, one of two local Guard units.

Powell said a conference of all public relations officers of the National Guard in Maryland will be held in Baltimore between May 8 and May 22, at which time the campaign will be outlined from a standpoint of publicity and advertising. An officer or a non-commissioned officer from each Guard unit in the state will be ordered to attend the conference.

In the meantime, Capt. Powell declared, a local effort is being made to obtain recruits for both Headquarters Company and Company C, stationed here. Both local units were federally recognized and activated December 12, and have about 100 enlisted men between them. About 150 more men are needed to bring the two companies to full peacetime strength.

Headquarters Company is presently seeking to complete its organization of a full communications section and radio men, linesmen, switchboard technicians and operators are needed. Men between the ages of 18 and 21 may apply for these assignments, and the Guard is especially interested in enlisting men without prior military training, so the younger men can be educated in the school of the soldier and various technical jobs.

The two companies drill each Wednesday night at the State Armory, and at present, Headquarters Company is holding an extra drill each Thursday, with Company C holding an extra drill on Monday. These extra drills are temporary and are being held to help get the two units fully organized and equipped.

Eight men were added to the roster of Headquarters Company this week, Capt. Powell announced. They include, David L. Rinker, Jr., Joseph E. Jolley, Melvin Robertson, John E. Kimmell, Donald R. Davis, Charles E. Cubbage, Leo A. Briner and Fred W. Schneider.

Key Club Plan For Training Young Men For Leadership Is Explained

Kiwanis Project Is Outlined By Swain

Key clubs give high school students practical experience in citizenship responsibilities and are providing better trained leaders for the future, Buddy Swain, Cape May, N. J., International Key Club trustee, asserted in an address before the Cumberland Kiwanis Club Thursday in discussing the subject "How Key Clubs Operate?"

Sponsoring of Key Clubs in high schools is the finest thing Kiwanis is doing in the country today, despite its many other worthwhile projects, Swain, who is also president of the Junior class in Cape May High School, told the Kiwanians. Membership in Key Clubs is helping to build better communities, he added, declaring that it is the job of every Kiwanis Club to help establish Key Clubs. There is no better project for you to undertake, Swain said.

Will Train Leaders

Leaders for tomorrow must be trained, the youthful speaker said, asserting that boys need special training and added that Kiwanis has a plan for training "leaders of tomorrow". The Key Club idea is not new, he said, as the first one was organized in California in 1925. The idea works everywhere that it has been tried and boys and high school principals alike are enthusiastic about the idea.

Declaring that "no job is too great or too small" for Key Club members, Swain outlined a number of projects which Key Clubs are carrying on in high schools throughout the country. The clubs render an important service to the school and also the community, the speaker stated. Leadership is needed in high school and Key Clubs furnish group leadership and the advantages to the boys are many.

Members learn to think for themselves, learn to be useful, to give service and to cooperate with other groups. "You learn things by working in Key Clubs which you can't get out of text books" the speaker asserted. He challenged the Kiwanis Club here to sponsor Key Clubs in local high schools.

Key Clubs meet once each week, at school Swain said, with one or more Kiwanians present at each meeting. Each week two or more members of the Key club attend the regular Kiwanis meeting until all members have attended. He outlined the six objects of Key Club as follows:

1—To develop initiative and leadership.

2—To provide experience in living and working together.

3—To serve the school and community.

4—To cooperate with the school principal.

5—To prepare for useful citizenship.

6—To accept and promote the constitutional objects of Kiwanis International.

Young Swain was accompanied by his father, Charles Swain, International Chairman of the Key Club movement and past district governor of the New Jersey Kiwanis District. Mr. Swain briefly outlined the Key Club movement, asserting that the Key Club movement is the most constructive work Kiwanis is doing today in terms of future service. The world moves forward on the feet of youth and progress must be made by young people, who will be the leaders of the future, Mr Swain declared.

Key Clubs develop leadership, build character and help to build a better world, Mr. Swain said, before introducing his son, who made the principal address. "Today's Key youth becomes tomorrow's key men" he concluded.

FORMER RESIDENT OF MANILA VISITS HERE

Mrs. Markalee H. Nestle, Seattle, Wash., has been a guest for the past week of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Sisson, 701 Hill Top Drive. Sisson is general secretary of Central YMCA.

The left yesterday morning for Washington, D. C., to arrange for obtaining visas before returning to Manila, Philippine Islands, in July.

Mrs. Nestle's husband, a YMCA secretary for 17 years, is now engaged in the export business in Manila, where they resided for 10 years before the war. Their son, Markalee, Jr., now a high school senior in Seattle, was born in Tallinn, Estonia, where Mr. Nestle was stationed for two and a half years in YMCA work.

Mrs. Nestle will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Sisson, Binghamton, N. Y., before joining her husband in Springfield, Mass., for a reunion of his class at Springfield College.

Mrs. Nestle described the Filipino people as hardworking and industrious, adding that they place a high value on education, due to the work of Amercian teachers who went out to the Philippines after the Spanish-American War and spent many years in raising educational standards.

Most Americans, she said, fail to realize that Manila was almost totally destroyed during the war, and that it will take years to replace the bombed-out buildings.

National Guard Plans State-Wide Recruiting Drive

Two Local Units Need 150 Men

Plans are being made by the Maryland National Guard for an intensive recruiting campaign throughout the state, according to information received yesterday from Baltimore by Capt. Robert L. Powell, commander of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 115th Infantry Regiment, one of two local Guard units.

Powell said a conference of all public relations officers of the National Guard in Maryland will be held in Baltimore between May 8 and May 22, at which time the campaign will be outlined from a standpoint of publicity and advertising. About 150 more men are needed to bring the two companies to full peacetime strength.

Headquarters Company is presently seeking to complete its organization of a full communications section and radio men, linesmen, switchboard technicians and operators are needed. Men between the ages of 18 and 21 may apply for these assignments, and the Guard is especially interested in enlisting men without prior military training, so the younger men can be educated in the school of the soldier and various technical jobs.

The two companies drill each Wednesday night at the State Armory, and at present, Headquarters Company is holding an extra drill each Thursday, with Company C holding an extra drill on Monday. These extra drills are temporary and are being held to help get the two units fully organized and equipped.

Eight men were added to the roster of Headquarters Company this week, Capt. Powell announced. They include, David L. Rinker, Jr., Joseph E. Jolley, Melvin Robertson, John E. Kimmell, Donald R. Davis, Charles E. Cubbage, Leo A. Briner and Fred W. Schneider.

Key Club Plan For Training Young Men For Leadership Is Explained

Kiwanis Project Is Outlined By Swain

Key clubs give high school students practical experience in citizenship responsibilities and are providing better trained leaders for the future, Buddy Swain, Cape May, N. J., International Key Club trustee, asserted in an address before the Cumberland Kiwanis Club Thursday in discussing the subject "How Key Clubs Operate?"

Sponsoring of Key Clubs in high schools is the finest thing Kiwanis is doing in the country today, despite its many other worthwhile projects, Swain, who is also president of the Junior class in Cape May High School, told the Kiwanians. Membership in Key Clubs is helping to build better communities, he added, declaring that it is the job of every Kiwanis Club to help establish Key Clubs. There is no better project for you to undertake, Swain said.

Will Train Leaders

Leaders for tomorrow must be trained, the youthful speaker said, asserting that boys need special training and added that Kiwanis has a plan for training "leaders of tomorrow". The Key Club idea is not new, he said, as the first one was organized in California in 1925. The idea works everywhere that it has been tried and boys and high school principals alike are enthusiastic about the idea.

Declaring that "no job is too great or too small" for Key Club members, Swain outlined a number of projects which Key Clubs are carrying on in high schools throughout the country. The clubs render an important service to the school and also the community, the speaker stated. Leadership is needed in high school and Key Clubs furnish group leadership and the advantages to the boys are many.

Members learn to think for themselves, learn to be useful, to give service and to cooperate with other groups. "You learn things by working in Key Clubs which you can't get out of text books" the speaker asserted. He challenged the Kiwanis Club here to sponsor Key Clubs in local high schools.

Key Clubs meet once each week, at school Swain said, with one or more Kiwanians present at each meeting. Each week two or more members of the Key club attend the regular Kiwanis meeting until all members have attended. He outlined the six objects of Key Club as follows:

1—To develop initiative and leadership.

2—To provide experience in living and working together.

3—To serve the school and community.

4—To cooperate with the school principal.

5—To prepare for useful citizenship.

6—To accept and promote the constitutional objects of Kiwanis International.

Young Swain was accompanied by his father, Charles Swain, International Chairman of the Key Club movement and past district governor of the New Jersey Kiwanis District. Mr. Swain briefly outlined the Key Club movement, asserting that the Key Club movement is the most constructive work Kiwanis is doing today in terms of future service. The world moves forward on the feet of youth and progress must be made by young people, who will be the leaders of the future, Mr Swain declared.

Key Clubs develop leadership, build character and help to build a better world, Mr. Swain said, before introducing his son, who made the principal address. "Today's Key youth becomes tomorrow's key men" he concluded.

FORMER RESIDENT OF MANILA VISITS HERE

Mrs. Markalee H. Nestle, Seattle, Wash., has been a guest for the past week of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Sisson, 701 Hill Top Drive. Sisson is general secretary of Central YMCA.

The left yesterday morning for Washington, D. C., to arrange for obtaining visas before returning to Manila, Philippine Islands, in July.

Mrs. Nestle's husband, a YMCA secretary for 17 years, is now engaged in the export business in Manila, where they resided for 10 years before the war. Their son, Markalee, Jr., now a high school senior in Seattle, was born in Tallinn, Estonia, where Mr. Nestle was stationed for two and a half years in YMCA work.

Mrs. Nestle will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Sisson, Binghamton, N. Y., before joining her husband in Springfield, Mass., for a reunion of his class at Springfield College.

Mrs. Nestle described the Filipino people as hardworking and industrious, adding that they place a high value on education, due to the work of American teachers who went out to the Philippines after the Spanish-American War and spent many years in raising educational standards.

Most Americans, she said, fail to realize that Manila was almost totally destroyed during the war, and that it will take years to replace the bombed-out buildings.

SAO LUIZ (AP) — Burglars broke into the tax collection office here, but were unable to get into the safe where all the money is kept. However, their visit wasn't fruitless. They lugged off all the typewriters, desks, chairs and even pencils and paper.

Industry-Wide Mining Pact Could Prove Disastrous

John L. Lewis is a man of cunning—whatever else may be said about him—so he must see the point that the southern coal operators make when they reject the idea of industry-wide bargaining. No doubt he would like an agreement which could be reached in one series of negotiations and which would cover the entire country, but he knows that this result would be possibly disastrous to a substantial segment of the mining industry.

The South has a good case of preferential treatment. Its mines, for the most part, are located far from their markets and the consequent higher freight charges weaken its competitive position. The further fact that southern mine labor is generally less productive is another consideration. Nor will it do to overlook the circumstance that the lower cost of living in the South reduces somewhat the validity of the southern miners' claims for an absolute equality in wages with their fellow workers in the North and West.

These arguments apply of course in some degree to all businesses which operate the country over and they refute with clear and compelling force the current demand by labor for industry-wide adjustment of pay scales. If Mr. Lewis or any other union leader insists that every section of the nation pay the same wages he either invites a certain strike or takes a step toward the destruction of a part of an industry upon which so many of his followers depend for their livelihood.

Lewis, while committed to the principle of industry-wide bargaining on most matters, will appreciate the reasoning behind the position of the southern operators if he is wise. The nation will tolerate no new strikes at this point in its recovery program.

Bill To Equalize Taxes On Income Faces Obstacle

A method of remedying an inexcusable inequity is proposed in a bill introduced in Congress. The bill, by Representative Doughton, North Carolina Democrat, would apply the community property provision, now existing in nine states, to the entire nation.

In California, Texas, Washington, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Idaho, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and the territory of Hawaii, husbands and wives may file separate returns even though only one of them earns any income. As a result, they get lower income tax rates.

A family, for example, with $4,000 net income in 1945 paid $40 less in community property states than in any of the other of the 38 states. A family with $10,000 net income paid $440, or 17 per cent, less in community property states. A family with net income of $100,000 paid $13,680, or 20 per cent, less.

The effect is that residents of 38 states pay higher taxes than residents of nine states and a territory. While Congress is reducing income taxes, it should also equalize them.

The effect of the Doughton bill would be to make all states community property states for income tax purposes. It would achieve a general reduction in rates, benefiting the lower income brackets least. But Representative Knutson's tax bill, which benefits the lowest brackets most, has been criticized by the leftists for not socking the rich enough. Hence the Doughton bill may encounter severe criticism from friends of the "pee-pul."

Of course, the equality the Doughton bill aims at could be met by excluding all states from community property provisions. But it is generally admitted that this would require a constitutional amendment, and that a constitutional amendment of this sort would never be approved by the requisite 36 states.

National Crime Wave One Of Country's Major Problems

The national postwar crime wave that was foreseen by many persons is here. From every section of the nation come reports of outbreaks of violence which have never been equalled on a national scale. The police forces are battling valiantly against this assault against the lives and property of the people, and they are hanging up an enviable record in apprehending the evil-doers. Murderers and bandits are being rounded up and sentenced to penitentiaries or the electric chair with precision.

Few perpetrators of major crimes are going unpunished. Police are better equipped than ever to disrupt their best-laid plans for escape. The rapidity with which the law closes in on criminals today cannot help but impress the culprits that are apprehended.

But apparently police efficiency and the alacrity with which courts mete out justice is not having the effect that might be expected in discouraging crime. For every criminal that is removed from circulation, two are spawned, it seems, to take his place. This is the discouraging aspect of the present situation. If the inevitability of justice and punishment is ineffective as a deterrent to crime, what can deter those to whom the thought of straying from the straight and narrow becomes attractive?

Not only is the present crime wave of greater proportions and more widespread than any in history, but the crimes that are being committed are more atrocious and the criminals more vicious than was the pattern in the past. There is no doubt that this is one of the country's major problems.

When To Talk Tough

Chairman Gurney of the Senate Armed Forces committee promises a speedup drive to put the Army and Navy in condition for any eventuality. He lists, as "must" legislation, armed forces unification, universal military training and an adequate military budget.

"You can't talk a tough foreign policy without having the means to back it up," Senator Gurney says. We hope Congress accepts that view.

Whether we choose to term our foreign policy tough, firm or merely realistic, we are asking for trouble unless we are prepared to defend ourselves. The best insurance against a blitz attack is to be too well prepared to invite one.

This is the most extraordinary record. May is here and there hasn't been a single report that the wheat crop may be ruined.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

DAMAGE FROM INFECTED TONSILS

THERE is considerable confusion in the minds of most individuals about the function of the tonsils and whether it is wise to have them removed. Seldom does a day pass that the physician is not confronted with questions of this nature. Are the glands a liability or an asset? How does a person know when operation is needed?

The structures are but one part of a ring of glandular tissue in the back of the throat. They are seen easily as two olive sized masses on each side of the entrance to the pharnyx. Above and out of sight, because of the dangling part of the soft palate [uvula], are the adenoids, and below, near the base of the tongue, lay the lingual tonsils.

Whenever the throat is invaded by bacteria, the infection is kept from spreading elsewhere by this lympoid material. In other words, the tonsils and adenoids act as the first line of defense and, in the presence of a cold, become puffy and inflamed. This response is most noticeable in youngsters and is so great at times that the air passageways are almost blocked. As the bout subsides, the swelling decreases but with repeated attacks, permanent enlargement may ensue. In shrinking, organisms and bits of infected debris may be retained in the folds and continue to smolder for months or years thereafter.

Apparently the protective organs are more important to children than adults. When the structures have weathered various storms in their early days, and emerge unscathed, they become smaller and hardly discernible. Now and then, on examining the mouth of a young man or woman, the doctor asks when the tonsils were taken out and is embarrassed to learn that the procedure had never been done.

But when the tonsils and adenoids have done their job only too well and, in consequence, have become enlarged, removal is in order. Mere size, however, does not necessarily call for operation. But if they have grown to the extent that breathing and swallowing are impaired, then it is better to have them extirpated. In these circumstances, the tonsils may meet in the midline of the throat, while the adenoids sometimes obstruct the back of the nose, leading to mouth breathing. As a result, these individuals snore, sleep restlessly, and may gag when swallowing.

When the structures are left infected, the victim may have frequent colds, persistent sore throat, sinus trouble, repeated attacks of tonsilitis, or quinsy. Others have enlarged glands in the neck which remain as telltale evidence of a disease condition of the pharnyx. Occasionally the only cause for malnutrition, underweight, fatigue, loss of appetite, anemia, or aching joints and muscles can be traced to bad tonsils.

Examination usually reveals the true situation but with borderline cases, it is not so simple and several physicians may not agree. In many instances the proof of the pudding is in the eating and the surgical procedure must be performed in order to detemrine whether relief will follow.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

I see where the Duke of Windsor, former king of England, helped put out a fire in the swank Waldorf-Astoria in New York. There are several rumors as to how the fire started.

Frankly, I don't believe the one about Oscar of the Waldorf letting a crepe suzette get out of control.

It's more likely that one of the guests took a look at his hotel bill and got hot under the collar. It wasn't much of a fire to start with, but all the guests kept going by, throwing their bills into the fire.

The Duke came through with flying colors. He finally smothered the fire with his butler.

The Duchess remained calm and cool in the face of disaster. She maintained her reserve and just sat through the whole thing toasting crumpets.

For his heroism the Duke has been made an honorary member of the New York Fire Department. The commissioners gave him a Dalmatian and two of La Guardia's old fire hats.

If royalty ever came to the firehouse, we would be sure to see some radical changes. There would be two hoses on every fire engine—one for water and one for tea. And when the alarm sounded in the firehouse, it would be difficult to determine whether it was a fire or just the Duchess calling the Duke.

And all this would eventually do away with the old-fashioned housewarming. I can see the engraved invitations now—"You are cordially invited to a fire at Lady Mendall's."

Marshall Reports Russians Banking On U. S. Economic Depression; Secretary Of State Gains Stature As Diplomat; Duke Returning To England

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—One of the most significant things General Marshall reported to President Truman following his return from Moscow was his impression that the Russians are stalling for time, banking on a depression in the USA.

Stalin didn't tell this to Marshall, though he did emphasize that the Russians were quite willing to have the peace talks continue for some time. However, the Secretary of State is convinced—and so reported to his chief and others—that an American economic depression is the chief thing the Russians are waiting for.

An American depression would mean three things: 1, Converts for the Communist system in the USA; 2, Weakening the United States in the eyes of Europe; 3, Strengthening the Communist system—now none too strong—in Russia.

All this is one reason why Truman has been getting many reports from his Council of Economic Advisers and has made repeated appeals for price reduction.

Kept Stalin Guessing

General Marshall's widely publicized meeting at the White House the other night might just as well have been broadcast. The Congressmen who attended heard only two things that the Secretary of State did not tell the nation in his radio report later.

Marshall did impress his listeners with one important thing—his own increased assurance. Before going to Moscow he seemed unsure of himself in his new role of diplomat. But those who listened to him at the White House felt that the Moscow Conference had given the military-man-turned-peacemaker a new self-confidence.

One new aspect Marshall gave the solons was that he felt he had been psychologically wise in waiting until nearly the end of the conference before seeking an audience with Generalissimo Stalin. Other foreign ministers had asked for an interview early in the conference, but Marshall said he deliberately held back.

"It kept the Russians guessing," he explained.

Marshall said he himself had done most of the talking during his Stalin interview. He had outlined the American position not to abandon our interest in Europe and explained that American objectives were "a matter of determined principle" upon which we are not prepared to yield. Russian disregard for earlier commitments, he said, was seriously straining relations between the two countries.

Stalin, Marshall reported, listened quietly and gravely, at no point resentful of the American's blunt language. Stalin said little, beyond elaborating on the belief that "a possible area of agreement" can be reached after both sides had exhausted their arguments.

Penny-Pinching Taber

After Marshall finished his main report to Congressional leaders, he invited questions. This brought out the second new disclosure, namely that the Truman speech proposing the Greek-Turkish loan "profoundly impressed and jolted" the Russians.

This question was asked by Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur Vandenburg, who did most of the cross-examining, and whose questions were constructive and intelligent. The other chief questioner was Rep. John Taber of New York who knows little about foreign affairs, but who has established the reputation of being the No. 1 Congressional pennypincher.

Taber, incidentally, was the only man who caused Marshall to get somewhat impatient—when Taber complained about the cost to the American taxpayer of our occupation of the conquered areas and of the possible reparations agreements with Russia. President Truman however, became even more impatient.

As Marshall started to explain, the President interrupted.

"That is exactly the thing we're trying to work out," he said. "Some of our greatest difficulties arise from the fact that we are determined to spare the American taxpayer as much of this burden as possible."

Note—One or two Congressmen present felt that Truman might have gone even further and pointed out that sometimes the expenditure of a few preventative dollars in peacetime can save billions of wartime dollars later.

Balance-Wheel Barkley

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, recently returned from Egypt and the Near East, was attending a private lunch in the Capitol for the Duke of Windsor.

"Alben," remarked Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, with a sly grin, "you and Henry Wallace were both abroad at the same time. And, you know, we didn't miss either of you."

The genial Barkley got some good-natured ribbing from other Senatorial colleagues; which finally induced him to remind them that he had made a statement in Paris taking Wallace over the hurdles for his attacks on the Truman policy.

"Hereafter," added Barkley, "whenver Henry goes abroad, I'll have to go abroad, too, to counterbalance him."

Note—Though Barkley disagrees with Wallace on foreign policy, he has a high regard personally for the ex-vice president.

Duke Returns To England

The Duke told Senators that he was passing up the Kentucky Derby in order to return to England. This brought forth several inquiries as to whether the Duke might be receiving a new post from the British Government, whose throne he renounced to marry an American woman.

"No, I have no special plans along that line," he replied. "I'm interested in the general economic picture in Europe and hope to make a first-hand study of it."

He emphasized his anxiety about British coal production. He said it is imperative that something be done to improve miners if England's productive lot of the British coal capacity is to remain strong.

Improbability Of Agreement By Russia Completely Recognized

By MARK SULLIVAN

The two official speeches on our relations with Russia which America heard and read this week are the end of the chapter.

The speeches were by Secretary of State George C. Marshall and his Republican advisor John Foster Dulles. The two speeches were in effect one. The two officials had just returned from a conference in Moscow, in which they tried to reach an understanding with Russia. In that they failed. But they did arrive at understanding about Russia. This they told in their speeches, frankly and forcefully. And it is this that harks the chapter ending.

Nearly a year ago, another Secretary of State, Mr. Marshall's predecessor, James F. Byrnes, conferred with the Russians at Paris. On his return he recited difficulty he had had:

"Our experience suggests that understanding . . . with our Soviet friends, cannot be reached until we have gone through rounds of verbal combat, in which old complaints are repeated, past positions reaffirmed, differences accentuated and cries provoked."

Russians Do Not Want Agreement

America read that from Mr. Byrnes a year ago and supposed that the difficulty in coming to agreement with the Russians was merely verbal continuousness on their part, a trait of intellectual argumentativeness. But Secretary Marshall now knows it is something quite different and more serious. The difficulty in arriving at understanding with the Russians is that the Russians don't want understanding.

At one point in his speech Mr. Marshall put it in extraordinarily plain language. He was talking about an attempt to arrive at a pact with the Russians about the future of Germany. Mr. Marshall said: "I was forced to the conclusion . . . that the Soviet government either did not desire such a pact or was following a course calculated to delay any immediate prospect of its adoption."

Again and again phrases and sentences in Mr. Marshall's speech reflect his conclusion that the Russians do not wish to agree: "This unwillingness of the Soviet authorities to cooperate" . . . "no disposition to proceed on a basis of reciprocity", "their refusal to carry out . . ."

If the Russians do not wish to come to agreement what is their motive? Secretary Marshall does not assign a motive in direct words. But the motive is plain in his statement of the condition which would result from Russia's course of delay:

"We cannot ignore the factor of time . . . The recovery of Europe has been far slower than had been expected. Disintegrating forces are becoming evident. The patient is sinking while the doctors deliberate." Secretary Marshall says that the purpose Russia has about Germany "could result only in a deteriorating economic life in Germany and Europe and the inevitable emergence of dictatorship and strife."

The purpose of the agreement and the settlements which Secretary Marshall went to Moscow to secure was to enable Germany and Europe to recover. Frustration of agreement and prevention of settlements means progressive degeneration not only of Germany but all Europe, economically and politically—ultimately and not long to wait for, chaos. Chaos would serve Russia's interest. It would enable her to extend Communism and the domination she has already imposed on the countries close to her border.

Burden Is Upon America

So long as agreements and settlements are frustrated, so so long as disintegration in Europe continues, a burden is upon us. To end this burden, and for every reason, we strive for economic recovery in Germany and Europe. If that economic recovery is indefinitely postponed, if ultimately it reaches the condition of chaos, no possible amount of help from us can avail. Complete disintegration of Europe would be a world-wide disaster. it would undermine economic order everywhere, including the United States; it would threaten capitalism everywhere. That, too, would be in the interest of Russian Communism.

Improbability of agreement by Russia is completely recognized in the reports Messrs. Marshall and Dulles made to America this week. They say we must face it and take a course to avert the consequences of it. Says Mr. Dulles, "We cannot let ourselves be stymied merely because we cannot get agreement . . ." Secretary Marshall coincides, "I believe that action cannot await compromise through exhaustion."

Phone Strike As Seen Through Recent Report On Stockholders

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 2 — Ever since the telephone strike started there have been references in the newspapers to the "national union" and to the "company." But who is the telephone company? Is it one man or one group or several? And who is fighting whom?

There are about 340,000 employees on strike, but there are 695,660 stockholders. Thus, the number of persons involved on the ownership side exceeds those on the union side.

More than one-half of the stockholders are women, while 62 per cent of the employes, including non-strikers, are women.

The average number of shares held by each stockholder is about 30 and no stockholder holds as much as one-half of one per cent of the total stock outstanding. The holders of from one to five shares number 207,400, while 655,900 stockholders, or 94 per cent of the total, hold less than 100 shares each.

The holders of 100 shares or more, including insurance companies, colleges, hospitals, and other institutions, total 39,800 and hold a total of 47 per cent of the stock.

In the Bell System itself, about 50,000 employes own stock in the company. Five states have more than 50,000 stockholders each, 26 states have more than 5,000 stockholders and no state has fewer than 500 stockholders.

These facts are to be derived from a reading of the 1946 annual report of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company issued on February 17th of this year.

Cross-Section of Savers

Here, therefore, is a cross section of the American people who have saved their money and who have received regular dividends from such investment. It is because the Bell System has paid regular dividends that so many people consider its securities a sound investment. More and more money is needed each year for expansion and the people furnish it out of their savings. Widows and orphans and trust estates usually buy Bell securities because of its sound financial policies and careful planning to meet the nation's needs.

Now if there is to be an across-the-board increase of several dollars per week to employes, the management must make up its mind if these increases can be afforded. The income of the telephone company and its subsidiary companies throughout the country is dependent on the rates that can be charged. These, in turn, are fixed by state commissions and by a federal commission.

Much of the controversy in the strike has revolved around the proposal that wages be arbitrated nationally or locally. The National Labor Relations Act was established in order to certify proper bargaining units. The local telephone companies, known as subsidiaries, have been certified as the appropriate bargaining units in their respective areas. This means that, while the union may be national in scope, the law as interpreted by the labor board requires bargaining at the local level.

The unions contend that they will bargain locally but that the pattern must be set and can be fixed by national arbitration. The company contends that arbitration of wages is a factor which belongs under bargaining and that, as long as the local companies are the legally designated agents, the bargaining and negotiating—including any arbitration—must be carried on by the subsidiaries or regional companies. There are about 16 of these companies which supply telephone service and there are a few manufacturing companies affiliated with the parent company.

A. T. and T. Stock Holdings

The annual report shows that the A. T. and T. owns all or nearly all the stock of the subsidiary companies. Notwithstanding this fact, the local or regional companies have been designated as bargaining agents. Doubtless this is because the rates of income are fixed locally by state commissions and hence wage increases would have to be followed by applications for rate increases in each area.

The telephone company represents a significant example of popular ownership as contrasted with concentrated or group ownership. The public, therefore, is seeing a battle between nearly 700,000 owners and 340,000 striking employes, each side acting through designated representatives. The outcome is certain to be some increase in wages and eventually some increase in the telephone rates.

THESE DAYS By George E. Sokolsky

THE Leftist line on George Marshall's speech was swift to assert itself as a propagandistic instrument for the confusion of Americans The Leftists take a single paragraph from Marshall's report, high-light it out of context and proportion and seek to give the impression that the Moscow Conference was not a Soviet-produced failure, but rather that Stalin said that compromise could come with patience and that all the United States needs to do is to let the Russians set the timetable for peace. Then peace will ultimately appear at the will and behest of Stalin, who is now a very patient old man.

At Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam, the Soviet Union set the preliminary terms for peace, adopting so stiff and uncompromising an attitude that what should have been a consultation among allies in the interest of world reconstruction became an appeasement of one of the Allies, Soviet Russia, in her own interest. To this Mr. Roosevelt consented, at Teheran and Yalta, on the assumption that in time, he would be able to make a good boy out of Stalin. Now the Russians demand the exclusive right to make the timetable of peace, to have it suit their convenience exclusively, They cited the Moscow Conference to a social engagement, a preliminary talky-talk to suit their convenience. They ask the United States, Great Britain, France, and altogether some 50 nations to be patient while they, the Russians, get around to peace.

This is Marshall's statement of the Stalin attitude:

". . . He said, with reference to the conference, that these were only the first skirmishes and brushes of reconnaisance forces on this question. Differences had occurred in the past on other questions, and as a rule, after people had exhausted themselves in dispute they then recognized the necessity of compromise. It was possible that no great success would be achieved at this session, but he thought that compromises were possible on all the main questions, including demilitarization, political structure of Germany, reparations and economic unity. It was necessary to have patience and not become pessimistic."

The American Leftists accept that as an offer of compromise and ask Americans to accept that with the hope that everything will be satisfactory if we wait long enough—that is, if we await the Russian convenience. To this George Marshall replied:

"I sincerely hope that the Generalissimo is correct in the view he expressed and that it implies a greater spirit of cooperation by the Soviet delegation in future conferences. But we cannot ignore the factor of time involved here.

"The recovery of Europe has been far slower than had been expected. Disintegrating forces are becoming evident. The patient is sinking while the doctors deliberate. So I believe that action cannot await compromise through exhaustion. . . ."

And that position has been fully endorsed by John Foster Dulles and Senator Vandenberg. The United States cannot hang around the outer door of Stalin's sanctum waiting for Mr. Big to decide when it is right time for him to find compromise solutions for world peace. It is now nearly two years since V-E Day—and the war is not yet ended. For no war is over until a peace treaty is signed; no war is over while the victors are still quarrelling over the booty of war.

What must be done now is for the United States and Great Britain, and France, if she likes, to go it alone, to recognize a German government, to sign a treaty with Germany and Austria, to start Europe on the way to recovery. If it starts anywhere, it will affect everywhere. The Russians, of course, have not a little laugh at our expense, for while they are striping industries, capturing supplies, enslaving workers, infiltrating political parties and exercising social and economic pressures, we are footing all the bills alone. The American taxpayer is paying for this in higher taxes, higher cost of government, and higher prices. The Russians would prefer us to continue to pay that bill until it produces economic and political disaster in this country. Then they will hold another conference at which they will compromise. Patience—says Stalin. How long, Oh Lord!, say we.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Just Enough

How wise and happy any of us would be if we only knew when we had enough of anything—food, money, clothes, possessions, or even friends. Unfortunately we seem to be wanting more and more—of everything within our reach or our ability to attain.

The doctor tells us to eat just enough to satisfy our hunger, and stop there. Few of us take his advice. We are told to take exercise, but many go beyond just enough, and so weaken their bodily machines or badly damage them. There are those with a genius for making money, but the passion often becomes so intense that they lose their health and friends in its pursuit. They laugh at just enough to be able to live well and happily.

Recognition and public aplause are always encouraging, but if they are spread too thick, then the recipient is apt to become conceited, vain, and unappreciative of the finer things that so often slumber in the heart for the understanding few. Mere fame is a fleeting thing.

If you are the guest of a friend, then just stay long enough with him to want him to have you return. How many an otherwise happy gathering has been spoiled by a few who stayed too long! It is so easy to have too much of any good thing. How true the old adage: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." We need—and demand—just enough work, just enough diversion, to keep us interested and useful.

The most interesting person in the world can finally bore us. How many a traveler returns to his native land, from a foreign sojourn, with the statement that he had just enough to make him more appreciative than ever of his own country. Just enough of anything, therefore, is what furnishes spice for the whole.

Many a speaker has charmed his audience for the first half hour, only to lose its interest in the next half or whole hour. Just enough is enough!

Industry-Wide Mining Pact Could Prove Disastrous

John L. Lewis is a man of cunning—whatever else may be said about him—so he must see the point that the southern coal operators make when they reject the idea of industry-wide bargaining. No doubt he would like an agreement which could be reached in one series of negotiations and which would cover the entire country, but he knows that this result would be possibly disastrous to a substantial segment of the mining industry.

The South has a good case of preferential treatment. Its mines, for the most part, are located far from their markets and the consequent higher freight charges weaken its competitive position. The further fact that southern mine labor is generally less productive is another consideration. Nor will it do to overlook the circumstance that the lower cost of living in the South reduces somewhat the validity of the southern miners' claims for an absolute equality in wages with their fellow workers in the North and West.

These arguments apply of course in some degree to all businesses which operate the country over and they refute with clear and compelling force the current demand by labor for industry-wide adjustment of pay scales. If Mr. Lewis or any other union leader insists that every section of the nation pay the same wages he either invites a certain strike or takes a step toward the destruction of a part of an industry upon which so many of his followers depend for their livelihood.

Lewis, while committed to the principle of industry-wide bargaining on most matters, will appreciate the reasoning behind the position of the southern operators if he is wise. The nation will tolerate no new strikes at this point in its recovery program.

Bill To Equalize Taxes On Income Faces Obstacle

A method of remedying an inexcusable inequity is proposed in a bill introduced in Congress. The bill, by Representative Doughton, North Carolina Democrat, would apply the community property provision, now existing in nine states, to the entire nation.

In California, Texas, Washington, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Idaho, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and the territory of Hawaii, husbands and wives may file separate returns even though only one of them earns any income. As a result, they get lower income tax rates.

A family, for example, with $4,000 net income in 1945 paid $40 less in community property states than in any of the other of the 38 states. A family with $10,000 net income paid $440, or 17 per cent, less in community property states. A family with net income of $100,000 paid $13,680, or 20 per cent, less.

The effect is that residents of 38 states pay higher taxes than residents of nine states and a territory. While Congress is reducing income taxes, it should also equalize them.

The effect of the Doughton bill would be to make all states community property states for income tax purposes. It would achieve a general reduction in rates, benefiting the lower income brackets least. But Representative Knutson's tax bill, which benefits the lowest brackets most, has been criticized by the leftists for not socking the rich enough. Hence the Doughton bill may encounter severe criticism from friends of the "pee-pul."

Of course, the equality the Doughton bill aims at could be met by excluding all states from community property provisions. But it is generally admitted that this would require a constitutional amendment, and that a constitutional amendment of this sort would never be approved by the requisite 36 states.

National Crime Wave One Of Country's Major Problems

The national postwar crime wave that was foreseen by many persons is here. From every section of the nation come reports of outbreaks of violence which have never been equalled on a national scale. The police forces are battling valiantly against this assault against the lives and property of the people, and they are hanging up an enviable record in apprehending the evil-doers. Murderers and bandits are being rounded up and sentenced to penitentiaries or the electric chair with precision.

Few perpetrators of major crimes are going unpunished. Police are better equipped than ever to disrupt their best-laid plans for escape. The rapidity with which the law closes in on criminals today cannot help but impress the culprits that are apprehended.

But apparently police efficiency and the alacrity with which courts mete out justice is not having the effect that might be expected in discouraging crime. For every criminal that is removed from circulation, two are spawned, it seems, to take his place. This is the discouraging aspect of the present situation. If the inevitability of justice and punishment is ineffective as a deterrent to crime, what can deter those to whom the thought of straying from the straight and narrow becomes attractive?

Not only is the present crime wave of greater proportions and more widespread than any in history, but the crimes that are being committed are more atrocious and the criminals more vicious than was the pattern in the past. There is no doubt that this is one of the country's major problems.

When To Talk Tough

Chairman Gurney of the Senate Armed Forces committee promises a speedup drive to put the Army and Navy in condition for any eventuality. He lists, as "must" legislation, armed forces unification, universal military training and an adequate military budget.

"You can't talk a tough foreign policy without having the means to back it up," Senator Gurney says. We hope Congress accepts that view.

Whether we choose to term our foreign policy tough, firm or merely realistic, we are asking for trouble unless we are prepared to defend ourselves. The best insurance against a blitz attack is to be too well prepared to invite one.

This is the most extraordinary record. May is here and there hasn't been a single report that the wheat crop may be ruined.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

DAMAGE FROM INFECTED TONSILS

THERE is considerable confusion in the minds of most individuals about the function of the tonsils and whether it is wise to have them removed. Seldom does a day pass that the physician is not confronted with questions of this nature. Are the glands a liability or an asset? How does a person know when operation is needed?

The structures are but one part of a ring of glandular tissue in the back of the throat. They are seen easily as two olive sized masses on each side of the entrance to the pharnyx. Above and out of sight, because of the dangling part of the soft palate [uvula], are the adenoids, and below, near the base of the tongue, lay the lingual tonsils.

Whenever the throat is invaded by bacteria, the infection is kept from spreading elsewhere by this lympoid material. In other words, the tonsils and adenoids act as the first line of defense and, in the presence of a cold, become puffy and inflamed. This response is most noticeable in youngsters and is so great at times that the air passageways are almost blocked. As the bout subsides, the swelling decreases but with repeated attacks, permanent enlargement may ensue. In shrinking, organisms and bits of infected debris may be retained in the folds and continue to smolder for months or years thereafter.

Apparently the protective organs are more important to children than adults. When the structures have weathered various storms in their early days, and emerge unscathed, they become smaller and hardly discernible. Now and then, on examining the mouth of a young man or woman, the doctor asks when the tonsils were taken out and is embarrassed to learn that the procedure had never been done.

But when the tonsils and adenoids have done their job only too well and, in consequence, have become enlarged, removal is in order. Mere size, however, does not necessarily call for operation. But if they have grown to the extent that breathing and swallowing are impaired, then it is better to have them extirpated. In these circumstances, the tonsils may meet in the midline of the throat, while the adenoids sometimes obstruct the back of the nose, leading to mouth breathing. As a result, these individuals snore, sleep restlessly, and may gag when swallowing.

When the structures are left infected, the victim may have frequent colds, persistent sore throat, sinus trouble, repeated attacks of tonsilitis, or quinsy. Others have enlarged glands in the neck which remain as telltale evidence of a disease condition of the pharnyx. Occasionally the only cause for malnutrition, underweight, fatigue, loss of appetite, anemia, or aching joints and muscles can be traced to bad tonsils.

Examination usually reveals the true situation but with borderline cases, it is not so simple and several physicians may not agree. In many instances the proof of the pudding is in the eating and the surgical procedure must be performed in order to detemrine whether relief will follow.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

I see where the Duke of Windsor, former king of England, helped put out a fire in the swank Waldorf-Astoria in New York. There are several rumors as to how the fire started.

Frankly, I don't believe the one about Oscar of the Waldorf letting a crepe suzette get out of control.

It's more likely that one of the guests took a look at his hotel bill and got hot under the collar. It wasn't much of a fire to start with, but all the guests kept going by, throwing their bills into the fire.

The Duke came through with flying colors. He finally smothered the fire with his butler.

The Duchess remained calm and cool in the face of disaster. She maintained her reserve and just sat through the whole thing toasting crumpets.

For his heroism the Duke has been made an honorary member of the New York Fire Department. The commissioners gave him a Dalmatian and two of La Guardia's old fire hats.

If royalty ever came to the firehouse, we would be sure to see some radical changes. There would be two hoses on every fire engine—one for water and one for tea. And when the alarm sounded in the firehouse, it would be difficult to determine whether it was a fire or just the Duchess calling the Duke.

And all this would eventually do away with the old-fashioned housewarming. I can see the engraved invitations now—"You are cordially invited to a fire at Lady Mendall's."

Marshall Reports Russians Banking On U. S. Economic Depression; Secretary Of State Gains Stature As Diplomat; Duke Returning To England

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—One of the most significant things General Marshall reported to President Truman following his return from Moscow was his impression that the Russians are stalling for time, banking on a depression in the USA.

Stalin didn't tell this to Marshall, though he did emphasize that the Russians were quite willing to have the peace talks continue for some time. However, the Secretary of State is convinced—and so reported to his chief and others—that an American economic depression is the chief thing the Russians are waiting for.

An American depression would mean three things: 1, Converts for the Communist system in the USA; 2, Weakening the United States in the eyes of Europe; 3, Strengthening the Communist system—now none too strong—in Russia.

All this is one reason why Truman has been getting many reports from his Council of Economic Advisers and has made repeated appeals for price reduction.

Kept Stalin Guessing

General Marshall's widely publicized meeting at the White House the other night might just as well have been broadcast. The Congressmen who attended heard only two things that the Secretary of State did not tell the nation in his radio report later.

Marshall did impress his listeners with one important thing—his own increased assurance. Before going to Moscow he seemed unsure of himself in his new role of diplomat. But those who listened to him at the White House felt that the Moscow Conference had given the military-man-turned-peacemaker a new self-confidence.

One new aspect Marshall gave the solons was that he felt he had been psychologically wise in waiting until nearly the end of the conference before seeking an audience with Generalissimo Stalin. Other foreign ministers had asked for an interview early in the conference, but Marshall said he deliberately held back.

"It kept the Russians guessing," he explained.

Marshall said he himself had done most of the talking during his Stalin interview. He had outlined the American position not to abandon our interest in Europe and explained that American objectives were "a matter of determined principle" upon which we are not prepared to yield. Russian disregard for earlier commitments, he said, was seriously straining relations between the two countries.

Stalin, Marshall reported, listened quietly and gravely, at no point resentful of the American's blunt language. Stalin said little, beyond elaborating on the belief that "a "possible area of agreement" can be reached after both sides had exhausted their arguments.

Penny-Pinching Taber

After Marshall finished his main report to Congressional leaders, he invited questions. This brought out the second new disclosure, namely that the Truman speech proposing the Greek-Turkish loan "profoundly impressed and jolted" the Russians.

This question was asked by Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur Vandenburg, who did most of the cross-examining, and whose questions were constructive and intelligent. The other chief questioner was Rep. John Taber of New York who knows little about foreign affairs, but who has established the reputation of being the No. 1 Congressional pennypincher.

Taber, incidentally, was the only man who caused Marshall to get somewhat impatient—when Taber complained about the cost to the American taxpayer of our occupation of the conquered areas and of the possible reparations agreements with Russia. President Truman however, became even more impatient.

As Marshall started to explain, the President interrupted.

"That is exactly the thing we're trying to work out," he said. "Some of our greatest difficulties arise from the fact that we are determined to spare the American taxpayer as much of this burden as possible."

Note—One or two Congressmen present felt that Truman might have gone even further and pointed out that sometimes the expenditure of a few preventative dollars in peacetime can save billions of wartime dollars later.

Balance-Wheel Barkley

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, recently returned from Egypt and the Near East, was attending a private lunch in the Capitol for the Duke of Windsor.

"Alben," remarked Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, with a sly grin, "you and Henry Wallace were both abroad at the same time. And, you know, we didn't miss either of you."

The genial Barkley got some good-natured ribbing from other Senatorial colleagues; which finally induced him to remind them that he had made a statement in Paris taking Wallace over the hurdles for his attacks on the Truman policy.

"Hereafter," added Barkley, "whenver Henry goes abroad, I'll have to go abroad, too, to counterbalance him."

Note—Though Barkley disagrees with Wallace on foreign policy, he has a high regard personally for the ex-vice president.

Duke Returns To England

The Duke told Senators that he was passing up the Kentucky Derby in order to return to England. This brought forth several inquiries as to whether the Duke might be receiving a new post from the British Government, whose throne he renounced to marry an American woman.

"No, I have no special plans along that line," he replied. "I'm interested in the general economic picture in Europe and hope to make a first-hand study of it."

He emphasized his anxiety about British coal production. He said it is imperative that something be done to improve miners if England's productive the lot of the British coal capacity is to remain strong.

Improbability Of Agreement By Russia Completely Recognized

By MARK SULLIVAN

The two official speeches on our relations with Russia which America heard and read this week are the end of the chapter.

The speeches were by Secretary of State George C. Marshall and his Republican advisor John Foster Dulles. The two speeches were in effect one. The two officials had just returned from a conference in Moscow, in which they tried to reach an understanding with Russia. In that they failed. But they did arrive at understanding about Russia. This they told in their speeches, frankly and forcefully. And it is this that harks the chapter ending.

Nearly a year ago, another Secretary of State, Mr. Marshall's predecessor, James F. Byrnes, conferred with the Russians at Paris. On his return he recited difficulty he had had:

"Our experience suggests that understanding . . . with our Soviet friends, cannot be reached until we have gone through rounds of verbal combat, in which old complaints are repeated, past positions reaffirmed, differences accentuated and cries provoked."

Russians Do Not Want Agreement

America read that from Mr. Byrnes a year ago and supposed that the difficulty in coming to agreement with the Russians was merely verbal continuousness on their part, a trait of intellectual argumentativeness. But Secretary Marshall now knows it is something quite different and more serious. The difficulty in arriving at understanding with the Russians is that the Russians don't want understanding.

At one point in his speech Mr. Marshall put it in extraordinarily plain language. He was talking about an attempt to arrive at a pact with the Russians about the future of Germany. Mr. Marshall said: "I was forced to the conclusion . . . that the Soviet government either did not desire such a pact or was following a course calculated to delay any immediate prospect of its adoption."

Again and again phrases and sentences in Mr. Marshall's speech reflect his conclusion that the Russians do not wish to agree: "This unwillingness of the Soviet authorities to cooperate" . . . "no disposition to proceed on a basis of reciprocity", "their refusal to carry out . . ."

If the Russians do not wish to come to agreement what is their motive? Secretary Marshall does not assign a motive in direct words. But the motive is plain in his statement of the condition which would result from Russia's course of delay:

"We cannot ignore the factor of time . . . The recovery of Europe has been far slower than had been expected. Disintegrating forces are becoming evident. The patient is sinking while the doctors deliberate." Secretary Marshall says that the purpose Russia has about Germany "could result only in a deteriorating economic life in Germany and Europe and the inevitable emergence of dictatorship and strife."

The purpose of the agreement and the settlements which Secretary Marshall went to Moscow to secure was to enable Germany and Europe to recover. Frustration of agreement and prevention of settlements means progressive degeneration not only of Germany but all Europe, economically and politically—ultimately and not long to wait for, chaos. Chaos would serve Russia's interest. It would enable her to extend Communism and the domination she has already imposed on the countries close to her border.

Burden Is Upon America

So long as agreements and settlements are frustrated, so so long as disintegration in Europe continues, a burden is upon us. To end this burden, and for every reason, we strive for economic recovery in Germany and Europe. If that economic recovery is indefinitely postponed, if ultimately it reaches the condition of chaos, no possible amount of help from us can avail. Complete disintegration of Europe would be a world-wide disaster, it would undermine economic order everywhere, including the United States; it would threaten capitalism everywhere. That, too, would be in the interest of Russian Communism.

Improbability of agreement by Russia is completely recognized in the reports Messrs. Marshall and Dulles made to America this week. They say we must face it and take a course to avert the consequences of it. Says Mr. Dulles, "We cannot let ourselves be stymied merely because we cannot get agreement . . ." Secretary Marshall coincides. "I believe that action cannot await compromise through exhaustion."

And that position has been fully endorsed by John Foster Dulles and Senator Vandenberg. The United States cannot hang around the outer door of Stalin's sanctum waiting for Mr. Big to decide when it is right time for him to find compromise solutions for world peace. It is now nearly two years since V-E Day—and the war is not yet ended. For no war is over until a peace treaty is signed; no war is over while the victors are still quarrelling over the booty of war.

What must be done now is for the United States and Great Britain, and France, if she likes, to go it alone, to recognize a German government, to sign a treaty with Germany and Austria, to start Europe on the way to recovery. If it starts anywhere, it will affect everywhere. The Russians, of course, have not a little laugh at our expense, for while they are striping industries, capturing suppiles, enslaving workers, infiltrating political parties and exercising social and economic pressures, we are footing all the bills alone. The American taxpayer is paying for this in higher taxes, higher cost of government, and higher prices. The Russians would prefer us to continue to pay that bill until it produces economic and political disaster in this country. Then they will hold another conference at which they will compromise. Patience—says Stalin. How long, Oh Lord!, say we.

Phone Strike As Seen Through Recent Report On Stockholders

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 2 — Ever since the telephone strike started there have been references in the newspapers to the "national union" and to the "company." But who is the telephone company? Is it one man or one group or several? And who is fighting whom?

There are about 340,000 employees on strike, but there are 695,660 stockholders. Thus, the number of persons involved on the ownership side exceeds those on the union side.

More than one-half of the stockholders are women, while 62 per cent of the employes, including non-strikers, are women.

The average number of shares held by each stockholder is about 30 and no stockholder holds as much as one-half of one per cent of the total stock outstanding. The holders of from one to five shares number 207,400, while 655,900 stockholders, or 94 per cent of the total, hold less than 100 shares each.

The holders of 100 shares or more, including insurance companies, colleges, hospitals, and other institutions, total 39,800 and hold a total of 47 per cent of the stock.

In the Bell System itself, about 50,000 employes own stock in the company. Five states have more than 50,000 stockholders each, 26 states have more than 5,000 stockholders and no state has fewer than 500 stockholders.

These facts are to be derived from a reading of the 1946 annual report of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company issued on February 17th of this year.

Cross-Section of Savers

Here, therefore, is a cross section of the American people who have saved their money and who have received regular dividends from such investment. It is because the Bell System has paid regular dividends that so many people consider its securities a sound investment. More and more money is needed each year for expansion and the people furnish it out of their savings. Widows and orphans and trust estates usually buy Bell securities because of its sound financial policies and careful planning to meet the nation's needs.

Now if there is to be an across-the-board increase of several dollars per week to employes, the management must make up its mind if these increases can be afforded. The income of the telephone company and its subsidiary companies throughout the country is dependent on the rates that can be charged. These, in turn, are fixed by state commissions and by a federal commission.

Much of the controversy in the strike has revolved around the proposal that wages be arbitrated nationally or locally. The National Labor Relations Act was established in order to certify proper bargaining units. The local telephone companies, known as subsidiaries, have been certified as the appropriate bargaining units in their respective areas. This means that, while the union may be national in scope, the law as interpreted by the labor board requires bargaining at the local level.

The unions contend that they will bargain locally but that the pattern must be set and can be fixed by national arbitration. The company contends that arbitration of wages is a factor which belongs under bargaining and that, as long as the local companies are the legally designated agents, the bargaining and negotiating—including any arbitration—must be carried on by the subsidiaries or regional companies. There are about 16 of these companies which supply telephone service and there are a few manufacturing companies affiliated with the parent company.

A. T. and T. Stock Holdings

The annual report shows that the A. T. and T. owns all or nearly all the stock of the subsidiary companies. Notwithstanding this fact, the local or regional companies have been designated as bargaining agents. Doubtless this is because the rates of income are fixed locally by state commissions and hence wage increases would have to be followed by applications for rate increases in each area.

The telephone company represents a significant example of popular ownership as contrasted with concentrated or group ownership. The public, therefore, is seeing a battle between nearly 700,000 owners and 340,000 striking employes, each side acting through designated representatives. The outcome is certain to be some increase in wages and eventually some increase in the telephone rates.

THESE DAYS

By George E. Sokolsky

THE Leftist line on George Marshall's speech was swift to assert itself as a propagandistic instrument for the confusion of Americans. The Leftists take a single paragraph from Marshall's report, high-light it out of context and proportion and seek to give the impression that the Moscow Conference was not a Soviet-produced failure, but rather that Stalin said that compromise could come with patience and that all the United States needs to do is to let the Russians set the timetable for peace. Then peace will ultimately appear at the will and behest of Stalin, who is now a very patient old man.

At Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam, the Soviet Union set the preliminary terms for peace, adopting so stiff and uncompromising an attitude that what should have been a consultation among allies in the interest of world reconstruction became an appeasement of one of the Allies, Soviet Russia, in her own interest. To this Mr. Roosevelt consented, at Teheran and Yalta, on the assumption that in time, he would be able to make a good boy out of Stalin. Now the Russians demand the exclusive right to make the timetable of peace, to have it suit their convenience exclusively. They cited the Moscow Conference to a social engagement, a preliminary talky-talk to suit their convenience. They ask the United States, Great Britain, France, and altogether some 50 nations to be patient while they, the Russians, get around to peace.

This is Marshall's statement of the Stalin attitude:

". . . He said, with reference to the conference, that these were only the first skirmishes and brushes of reconnaisance forces on this question. Differences had occurred in the past on other questions, and as a rule, after people had exhausted themselves in dispute they then recognized the necessity of compromise. It was possible that no great success would be achieved at this session, but he thought that compromises were possible on all the main questions, including demilitarization, political structure of Germany, reparations and economic unity. It was necessary to have patience and not become pessimistic."

The American Leftists accept that as an offer of compromise and ask Americans to accept that with the hope that everything will be satisfactory if we wait long enough—that is, if we await the Russian convenience. To this George Marshall replied:

"I sincerely hope that the Generalissimo is correct in the view he expressed and that it implies a greater spirit of cooperation by the Soviet delegation in future conferences. But we cannot ignore the factor of time involved here.

"The recovery of Europe has been far slower than had been expected. Disintegrating forces are becoming evident. The patient is sinking while the doctors deliberate. So I believe that action cannot await compromise through exhaustion. . . ."

Today's Talk

Just Enough

How wise and happy any of us would be if we only knew when we had enough of anything—food, money, clothes, possessions, or even friends. Unfortunately we seem to be wanting more and more—of everything within our reach or our ability to attain.

The doctor tells us to eat just enough to satisfy our hunger, and stop there. Few of us take his advice. We are told to take exercise, but many go beyond just enough, and so weaken their bodily machines or badly damage them. There are those with a genius for making money, but the passion often becomes so intense that they lose their health and friends in its pursuit. They laugh at just enough to be able to live well and happily.

Recognition and public aplause are always encouraging, but if they are spread too thick, then the recipient is apt to become conceited, vain, and unappreciative of the finer things that so often slumber in the heart for the understanding few. Mere fame is a fleeting thing.

If you are the guest of a friend, then just stay long enough with him to want him to have you return. How many an otherwise happy gathering has been spoiled by a few who stayed too long! It is so easy to have too much of any good thing. How true the old adage: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." We need—and demand—just enough work, just enough diversion, to keep us interested and useful.

The most interesting person in the world can finally bore us. How many a traveler returns to his native land, from a foreign sojourn, with the statement that he had just enough to make him more appreciative than ever of his own country. Just enough of anything, therefore, is what furnishes spice for the whole.

Many a speaker has charmed his audience for the first half hour, only to lose its interest in the next half or whole hour. Just enough is enough!

Teen-Agers And The Mothers Who Don't Understand Them

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Many and vehement are the complaints received by this department from teen-agers whose mothers, they declare, don't understand them.

Most of this failure on the part of the mothers, it appears, has to do with youthful romances. Mother doesn't like the boy who, at the moment, has first place in the teen-ager's affections. Mother won't permit the teen-ager to go out in the evening with her boy friend. She thinks the teen-ager is too young for attentions from boys anyway.

Here's the sort of thing in excerpts from some of the teen-agers' letters:

"I am a girl of 17. My mother is wonderful to me in all ways except one. She does not believe that I should go out on dates."

"I am 15 years old and like a 15-year-old boy whom I have known for over a year. He comes from a nice family and has a good character and personality. My mother knows I like him, but won't let me go with boys or my school friends. She says I'm too young."

"I am 16 years old and like very much a boy who is 18. We have known each other for about two years. My problem is this: My parents do not want me to go out with boys."

"I am a girl of 13, who has everything a girl wants, including a baby grand piano, victrola and radio set combined in one, etc. But still I am not happy. My mother is 34 years old, and to me is very old fashioned. I have a boy friend, 14, who has parties quite often and invites me to them, but I am not allowed to go to any parties or to the movies. Do you think I am too young to go out with this 14-year-old boy or to any parties.

Boiled down to their essence, such complaints as these reduce, of course, to the fact that the teen-agers want more freedom and their mothers want them to be content with less.

In many situations, there is no doubt that the teen-ager is right and should have more freedom than she is allowed. In her anxiety to shelter her girl from every possibility of harm, her mother over-protects her, and in so doing circumscribes her daughter's life to an unnecessary and unwise degree.

In other situations, it is the mother who has the better of the argument, with the teen-ager demanding independence to an extent for which, at her age, she is not yet ready, as, perhaps, in the case of the 13-year-old girl.

Need it actually be so hard for mother and daughter to reach a compromise? And how can it be brought about?

Well, in the first place, it might be a good idea for the teen-ager to contemplate the possibility that, if her mother fails to understand her point of view, perhaps she, on her side, has made no effort to understand her mother. She has wanted all the concessions to be in her favor. She has not been willing to give honest consideration to the merits of her mother's arguments.

This same suggestion goes for those other mothers, too, who have been unwilling to acknowledge their daughters' right to a fair hearing. Instead of paying serious attention to what her teen-ager has to say, and talking it over on a woman-to-woman basis, the mother brushes the daughter off with the old "mother knows best" routine, or simply turns the situation into an excuse for a display of that type of parental authority which holds that, where children are concerned, it is "theirs not to reason why," but merely to render blind obedience.

Sometimes, I suspect, a maternal attitude of this kind stems from pure laziness, or, to be more charitable, plain busyness. Mother has her hands full running a household, no doubt about it, and its a great time-saver to just lay down the law and let things go at that. But if she would only remember that her willingness to realize the importance of establishing a state of understanding between herself and her children is the measure of her own intelligence, she might be readier to find the time for such discussions.

Nobody can be entirely right all the time, neither the teen-ager nor her mother. If each, on her side, would resolve to listen fairly to what the other has to say, to accord it the consideration it deserves, and to accept and abide by those parts of it which are logical and reasonable, such a procedure would go far toward reducing the number of teen-agers who feel they are misunderstood, and increasing the number of mothers who find in happy companionship with their daughters ample reward for the effort they have made to achieve it.

Self Expression Is Theme Of Junior Extension Meeting

A talk by Miss Dorothy Emerson, College Park, Girls 4-H Club agent for the state, on "Self Expression," highlighted the meeting of the Junior Extension 4-H Club, Thursday night, at the home of William and Granville Shumaker, Rawlings.

Miss Emerson explained that a person who is self conscious or has an inferiority complex is constantly thinking more of himself and urged that one should think more of the person or persons to whom he is speaking. She exhorted her audience to "be yourself" and not to use fancy language but to express the thing as one sees it and to remember that it is not difficult to speak to an individual without becoming self conscious, and that after all a group is composed of individuals.

Miss Emerson not only dwelt on speaking but also on writing interesting letters and reports. She told of spending two days reading reports at the national meeting and emphasized the fact that the few which were written in narrative or story form were not only easier to read but the thoughts stayed with one longer than the reports which were just facts and figures.

The speaker listed four types of talks, the one which the speaker plans to give, the one given, the one that should have been given and the one the speaker makes up on the way home.

Earl Morgan presided at the short business session, when William Powell was named assistant treasurer to June Morgan. A resolution was passed to send delegates to Club Week and the Rural Women's Short Course. The delegates will be named at the meeting June 4, at 8 at the James A. Morgan home, Carlos, at which time also the representative from the Farm Loan in Romney will be the speaker and will discuss "Farm and Home Loans." There will also be demonstrations by girls and boys 4-H members.

Reports on the clothing tour last month were given by Wilma Ryan Parker and William Powell. James Morgan reported on the success of the Sadie Hawkins party. The program also included group singing, led by Miss Gloria Bohn. Fifty members attended.

Cresaptown Youths Appeal Jail Sentence

Two Cresaptown youths who admitted looting an automobile and taking articles valued at $36.25, yesterday took an appeal when Magistrate Frank A. Perdew imposed six and nine months sentences in Allegany County Jail on them. They were released on $500 bond each.

The youths, James William Skelley, 19, who received the nine months sentence, and Gene Gilbert Keister, 20, sentenced to six months, confesssed to taking articles from the automobile of Carl Hersh, 605 Greene Street, while it was parked near the Clary Club Tuesday night.

They were given a hearing Thursday in Trial Magistrates Court but Magistrate Perdew withheld sentence until yesterday morning. Both have previous police records, the State's Attorney's office reported.

Brown Forfeits Bond

Eugene Brown, Wiley Ford, forfeited $10 bond yesterday in Police Court on drunk and disorderly conduct charges resulting from a rock-throwing incident at the Hi-Dee Club, Virginia Avenue, Thursday.

Police said Brown engaged in an argument in the place and then went to an alley where he picked up several rocks and began throwing them as he re-entered the club. Employes subdued him, police declared.

High Cost Of Living, Housing Big Problems Of U. S. Citizens

By Dr. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., May 2 — When President Truman recently voiced grave concern about the present level of prices, he was voicing the Number One concern of his constituents.

It is a problem which has headed the list of people's chief worries for a considerable period of time.

It topped the list back in January, 1946 and again in February of this year.

Second on the list of present worries which people say face them or their families is the problem of housing.

This has also been found second on lists of worries in 1946 and early 1947. It is a problem particularly fretting to veterans of World War II.

Personal problems—including anything from mother-in-law trouble to how to get a girl to say yes to a marriage proposal—are third on the list.

In February, shortages of household goods and other equipment held fourth place.

Today that has given way to a problem which was all too familiar back in the 30's but which disappeared with the war—how to find and hold a job.

Veterans are also finding this one a particularly bothersome problem, the poll finds.

In making its periodical checks on problems facing voters and their families, the Institute asks:

"What is the most important problem that you and your family face today?"

The list:

1. High Cost of Living, High Prices.
2. Housing: Getting a proper place to live.
3. Personal Family Problems, health, etc.
4. Jobs: Getting and holding a job.
5. Shortages: Household equipment, food, automobiles, etc.

Other problems concern worries about money, concern about security in the future. Farmers are worrying about crops, prices, etc.

A wonderful six out of every 100 said that neither they nor their families have any problems facing them today.

Teachers Wage Boost Is Attracting Many

Large numbers of out-of-state teachers are applying for positions with the Maryland Board of Education as a result of the recent salary boost, Dr. E. Clarke Fontaine, state supervisor of high schools and former principal at Allegany High told the State High School Principals' conference yesterday in the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

Among those attending the conference from Allegany County are Ralph R. Webster, Allegany principal; Victor D. Heisey, Fort Hill superintendent, and James E. Spitz-

"Teachers are literally flocking to the Maryland system attracted by the minimum wage of $2,200 annually and the increased yearly increments," Dr. Fontaine told the delegates.

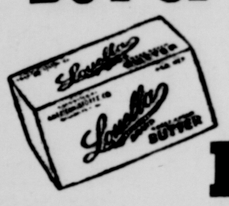

In the afternoon discussion principals were cornered with curriculum and administrative factors.

People wouldn't think of reading by candlelight in this modern age of electricity...

and Millions of Women wouldn't think of Laundering without Clorox...

WHEN you've used Clorox your senses say—and rightly so—"now, there's a wash to be proud of... it's Clorox-clean!" You see how snowy-white Clorox makes white cottons and linens (brightens fast colors); you smell their clean freshness; you hear praise of their beauty! Moreover, there's an invisible virtue enjoyed by Clorox users ... their laundry is sanitary. And Clorox conserves fabrics in two ways... an important economy in these days of high linen prices: First, Clorox bleaches and brightens extra-gently because it's ultra-refined... free from caustic and other harsh substances... it is made by an exclusive patented process. Second, Clorox reduces hard rubbing ... it not only conserves linens, it saves time and work as well. Yes, your senses and your good judgment agree... Clorox is tops in laundering!

When it's Clorox-clean... it's hygienically clean!

Clorox provides an extra margin of health protection in routine kitchen and bathroom cleansing. It disinfects ... also deodorizes and removes stains. Simply follow directions on the label.

Cresaptown Youths Appeal Jail Sentence

Two Cresaptown youths who admitted looting an automobile and taking articles valued at $36.25, yesterday took an appeal when Magistrate Frank A. Perdew imposed six and nine months sentences in Allegany County Jail on them. They were released on $500 bond each.

The youths, James William Skelley, 19, who received the nine months sentence, and Gene Gilbert Keister, 20, sentenced to six months, confesssed to taking articles from the automobile of Carl Hersh, 605 Greene Street, while it was parked near the Clary Club Tuesday night.

They were given a hearing Thursday in Trial Magistrates Court but Magistrate Perdew withheld sentence until yesterday morning. Both have previous police records, the State's Attorney's office reported.

Brown Forfeits Bond

Eugene Brown, Wiley Ford, forfeited $10 bond yesterday in Police Court on drunk and disorderly conduct charges resulting from a rock-throwing incident at the Hi-Dee Club, Virginia Avenue, Thursday.

Police said Brown engaged in an argument in the place and then went to an alley where he picked up several rocks and began throwing them as he re-entered the club. Employes subdued him, police declared.

High Cost Of Living, Housing Big Problems Of U. S. Citizens

By Dr. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., May 2 — When President Truman recently voiced grave concern about the present level of prices, he was voicing the Number One concern of his constituents.

It is a problem which has headed the list of people's chief worries for a considerable period of time.

It topped the list back in January, 1946 and again in February of this year.

Second on the list of present worries which people say face them or their families is the problem of housing.

This has also been found second on lists of worries in 1946 and early 1947. It is a problem particularly fretting to veterans of World War II.

Personal problems—including anything from mother-in-law trouble to how to get a girl to say yes to a marriage proposal—are third on the list.

In February, shortages of household goods and other equipment held fourth place.

Today that has given way to a problem which was all too familiar back in the 30's but which disappeared with the war—how to find and hold a job.

Veterans are also finding this one a particularly bothersome problem, the poll finds.

In making its periodical checks on problems facing voters and their families, the Institute asks:

"What is the most important problem that you and your family face today?"

The list:

1. High Cost of Living, High Prices.
2. Housing: Getting a proper place to live.
3. Personal Family Problems, health, etc.
4. Jobs: Getting and holding a job.
5. Shortages: Household equipment, food, automobiles, etc.

Other problems concern worries about money, concern about security in the future. Farmers are worrying about crops, prices, etc.

A wonderful six out of every 100 said that neither they nor their families have any problems facing them today.

Teachers Wage Boost Is Attracting Many

Large numbers of out-of-state teachers are applying for positions with the Maryland Board of Education as a result of the recent salary boost, Dr. E. Clarke Fontaine, state supervisor of high schools and former principal at Allegany High told the State High School Principals' conference yesterday in the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

Among those attending the conference from Allegany County are Ralph R. Webster, Allegany principal; Victor D. Heisey, Fort Hill superintendent, and James E. Spitz-

"Teachers are literally flocking to the Maryland system attracted by the minimum wage of $2,200 annually and the increased yearly increments," Dr. Fontaine told the delegates.

In the afternoon discussion principals were cornered with curriculum and administrative factors.

Garsson Firm Typewriters Figure In War Fraud Trial

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) —The government introduced greatly magnified photographs of typed words and figures today to support its charge in the Garsson-May war fraud trial that fake papers were used to hide alleged bribes to ex-Congressman Andrew J. May.

Frank M. Miller, an FBI identification expert, demonstrated the pictures. He said they show that typewriters of Garsson munitions firms were used to prepare bills for lumber supposedly submitted by the Cumberland Lumber Company of Kentucky in which May was interested.

May, wartime chairman of the House Military Committee, Henry and Murray Garsson and Joseph F. Freeman, Garsson agent in Washington, are being tried jointly. The government alleges there was a conspiracy to buy May's influence. It charges that May received more than $50,000 from Garsson firms to finance the lumber company but failed to deliver any lumber.

May has denied he profited from his deals with the Garssons, and says his only interest was promoting the war effort.

Miller's testimony attacked documents supposedly showing legitimate transactions between Cumberland and two Garsson firms, the Erie Basin and Batavia Metal Products Companies.

Miller said he examined bills to Erie and Batavia from Cumberland and samples from Erie and Batavia typewriters, and found the typing on all had been done on the same machines.

One of the typewriters, a 12-year-old machine, was entered into evidence as were the photographs. Miller said defects in typed letters were alike both on the Cumberland invoices and the Erie and Batavia typewriter specimens.

The defense tried to shake Miller's findings on the point that the Cumberland invoices were dated two years before the FBI specimens were obtained. Miller replied that although typewriters usually acquire more defects with long use, he was sure the typing in this case was the same.

Charter Vote Will Be Held Monday

Residents of Bowling Green will vote this Monday from 7 to 10 p. m. on whether or not they approve the charter granted the community by the Legislature.

The charter would establish a special taxation district for Bowling Green, whose residents now pay only state and county taxes.

Balloting will be held at the Bowling Green filling station located at the corner of McMullen Highway and the old Cresap Road. C. M. Spiker, Lloyd E. Auman and Austin G. Snyder were named previously as a board of election supervisors in charge of the referendum voting.

Under terms of the enabling act passed by the recent session of the Legislature and signed by Gov. Lane, the charter would provide a minimum tax rate of 20 cents per $100 of real estate value, up to a maximum of 50 cents.

If the charter is approved, a nine-man board of managers, named in the bill, would carry on in a temporary capacity until the first annual meeting next January, when a permanent board would be elected.

Present members of the board are Samuel S. Smith, Calvin R. Ayers, J. Frederick Walton, George T. Steigerwald, Clement C. May, Evan L. Feltner, Ernest E. McCullough, Harold E. Northrup and Ellsworth F. Brewer.

A community meeting, attended by approximately 75 persons, was held last night at Circle Inn to discuss various points in the charter. Speakers included C. William Gilchrist and Edward J. Ryan, local attorneys.

FDR's Papers Available

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—Executors of the Franklin D. Roosevelt estate said today through a spokesman they would send to Washington any of the late President's papers relative to Arabian oil dealings as a Senate committee announced it would call trustees and executors of the estate to testify May 8.

U. S. Naval Force Greeted By Turks

ISTANBUL, Turkey, May 2 (AP)—An American naval force, fresh from Mediterranean maneuvers, rode at anchor in the narrow Bosphorus tonight at the start of a five-day visit which Turks accepted happily as another manifestation of a friendship they want so badly.

This was the third time within a year that American warships have come to Turkey, whose guardianship of the Dardanelles has placed her face to face with Russian demands for a hand in control of the straits. It was the first time that an aircraft carrier ever had traversed the Dardanelles.

While the United States Navy insisted the stay here simply was a social call during a break in training exercises, the average Turk had other ideas, especially in view of the proposed American aid to their country.

Thousands of cheering peasants stood waving along the shores of the Dardanelles as the four-ship unit, including the 27,000-ton carrier Leyte, steamed toward Istanbul last night. Massed thousands stood with quiet interest as the craft dropped anchor just off famed old Dolma Bagchen Palace after an exchange of salutes with the Turkish port and warships this morning.

Martin Predicts House Approval Of Aid Bill

WASHINGTON, May 2—(AP)—Speaker Martin (R-Mass) predicted House passage "by a substantial majority" of the administration's $400,000,000 Greek-Turkish aid bill today as it squeaked through the Rules Committee on the way to the floor for action next week.

By the close vote of six to five, the Rules Committee cleared the way for nine hours of general debate, beginning Monday, under an "open rule"—procedure under which any sort of amendment may be offered.

Ahe action came after a last ditch attempt in closed session to hold up the measure indefinitely to obtain the views of Secretary of State Marshall against the background of the Moscow conference.

Negotiations involving Western Electric and Southwestern Bell Telephone Companies, two important affiliates of the A. T. and T., were in recess until tomorrow morning.

John J. Moran, president of the long lines union, told reporters:

"They made what they called a wage offer. But we are bargaining, not begging. We have been on strike a month but we are not begging. This 7½ billion dollar corporation—if it can't afford a wage offer in accordance with the national pattern, I don't know the reason why."

"Lippy" Durocher First Eulogized, Then Lampooned

Marriage Legality Hearing Completed

LOS ANGELES, May 2 (AP) — Leo Durocher, suspended manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers who sometimes talks back to umpires—and judges—was alternately lampooned and eulogized today by opposing attorneys on whether he is legally married to Actress Laraine Day.

Bushy - browed, 79-year-old Joseph Scott, dean of the Los Angeles Bar, declared that Lippy Leo's marriage to Miss Day was another instance of defying the umpire—in this case the California courts.

Miss Day's attorney, Isaac Pacht, said Leo is a "fine gentleman" who did "what any honorable man would do under the circumstances" — namely, marry Laraine after she had divorced her former husband, J. Ray Hendricks, airplane parts dealer.

In his summation Pacht told the court that Durocher is the most colorful baseball figure since Kenesaw Mountain Landis (late baseball commissioner), adding: "Leo Durocher is one of the finest men I ever met."

The hearing, which ended late today with the attorneys' summation, was on an order to show cause why Miss Day's California interlocutory divorce from Hendricks should not be set aside.

Scott, one of three attorneys appointed as "friends of the court" to prosecute the action, stalked about the courtroom in an enactment of how he said Durocher behaved during a ballgame.

He dramatically went through the motions of getting himself a base-hit and of throwing a batter out at first.

Then his voice swelled through the courtroom, carried through the corridors and into the streets.

Scott was paging Durocher in a voice that Juliet couldn't possibly have matched in volume.

"Romeo, Romeo, wherefore art thou, Romeo?" inquired Scott.

"Where is Durocher? With the young bloods of my day, if a lady got in a jam such as this, a team of wild horses couldn't have kept him away from his gal. But Lippy Leo isn't here."

Scott harkened to the days of the vigilantes to explain what early California thought of a character like the deposed manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Back in the "days of old, the days of gold, the days of '49," the attorney explained, Californians didn't think much of men who failed to come to the rescue of their women.

"He so aroused this girl," said Scott as he pointed at the shrinking Miss Day, a short distance away within the court railing, "that she said:

" 'I'll live with him anywhere outside the State of California.' So she got this Mexican divorce, which is void."

Then Scott excoriated Durocher for what he said Leo spoke to Superior Judge George A. Dockweiler, who granted Laraine her decree from Hendricks, when the judge called her and Durocher on the carpet to rebuke them for their hasty marriage the next day in El Paso, Tex.

Durocher blasted Judge Dockweiler last January 29 as the "most unethical and publicity-conscious servant of the people."

ALEMAN CHEERED—President Miguel Aleman, of Mexico, stood in the leading car and waved as a parade in his honor moved through a lane of cheering New Yorkers at Broadway and Wall Street yesterday.

Aleman Says Mexico Welcomes U. S. Capital "Willing To Observe Laws"

NEW YORK, May 2—(AP)—President Miguel Aleman, of Mexico, declared tonight his country welcomed American capital "willing to observe its laws and be satisfied with a fair profit."

Addressing a dinner by the Pan American Society honoring him, Aleman recalled approvingly the following words spoken by former President Franklin D. Roosevelt at Monterrey, Mexico, in 1943:

"We know that the days of the exploitation of the resources and the people of one country for the benefit of any group in another country are definitely over."

The Mexican Chief Executive, who spoke in Spanish, then remarked that "American capital that really means to share in the life of Mexico; that is willing to observe its laws and be satisfied with a fair profit, without selfish greed or the illusion of becoming a law unto itself, shall be welcome to Mexico and will derive all the advantages that American citizens who are cooperating with us in the economic development of my country are actually enjoying."

In a crowded day before the dinner, New York gave Aleman one of its old-fashioned welcomes with all the trimmings, offering the smiling visitor a Broadway parade, honorary citizenship and a Columbia University honorary degree.

It was the first visit of the Mexican president to the metropolis.

Woman Admits Shooting Husband, Firing House

BECKLEY, W. Va., May 2 (AP)—Firemen dragged the body of a 54-year-old mine foreman from his burning home at nearby Glen White today, and State Police Sgt. Anthony Scalise reported that the man's wife admitted she shot her husband four nights ago.

Upon the insistence of neighbors that he still was in the house, the firefighters groped through the smoke to find the dead man, I. H. Harper, lying upon a bed on the second story, a bullet wound through his head.

Scalise said that after almost continuous questioning throughout the day, Mrs. Virgie Harper, 47, signed a statement that she fired the fatal shot last Monday night after her husband beat her, and then set fire to the house early today.

Scalise added that a formal charge of murder was filed and Mrs. Harper was lodged in the Raleigh County jail.

Sicilian May Day Massacre Causes Assembly Battle

Mafia Leader Blamed For Deaths Of Eight

ROME, May 2 (AP)—Fist fights flared in the Constituent Assembly today after a Sicilian Communist leader blamed the May Day massacre of eight labor demonstrators near Palermo on a leader of the Mafia and cried out "we are before an organization trying to provoke civil war in Italy."

In Sicily heavy police forces scoured the bandit-infested mountains for the mounted men who poured 10 minutes of deadly machine-gun fire into the unsuspecting ranks of 400 labor demonstrators at Portella Della Ginestra. The toll mounted to eight with the death of another woman, the second in the list of victims. A child was among the 33 wounded.

The Interior Ministry here said 64 persons had been arrested thus far. Palermo dispatches placed the total at 30.

The executive committee of the powerful General Labor Confederation tonight called a half-day general strike throughout Italy for tomorrow in protest of the massacre. In Rome, workers quit their jobs for two hours today in a manifestation of sympathy for the ambush victims.

Grizzled 51-year-old Girolamo Li Causi, whose Communist-Socialist bloc scored smashing gains in the recent regional elections in Sicily, charged in the Chamber of Deputies that the ambush was provoked by "rightists and monarchists," and named a Black Hand leader who he said was responsible for the actual slayings.

"He has already made obscure threats," Li Causi added.

A short time later a right wing deputy shouted out the word "criminal," and infuriated Communists and Socialists left their seats and met advancing deputies of the right on the floor of the Assembly hall in Montecitoriou Palace.

A chair hurtled toward the mass of lawmakers who pummelled each other for 10 minutes. No one was injured seriously.

Socialist Leader Pietro Nenni arose at the shout of "criminal," which was explained later by a Qualunquist (rightist) deputy as referring to the May Day crime and not to Li Causi.

"We cannot stand this insult," Nenni declared. He banged closed his desk and a Communist deputy rushed from his side of the room toward the right. The rightists arose to meet him and the fight—described by one Rome newspaper as the worst in Assembly history—was on.

Demos In Truman's Home County Make Purge Move

Premier Of France Offers Challenge

PARIS, May 2 (AP) — Premier Paul Ramadier challenged the National Assembly today to renew its full support of his stand-still wage program in opposition to the Communists, or throw him out and accept the responsibility of a new government.

Asking the Assembly for a vote of confidence, Ramadier stood pat against granting any wage increases in the French economy, on the ground that France would be threatened by skyrocketing prices and disastrous inflation, and declared:

"If you agree with me, we will continue (in office). If not, let others take the responsibility."

While the Assembly decided to put the question of confidence to a vote on Sunday, striking Renault auto workers, whose demands for a 10-franc (8.4) cents hourly wage increase precipitated the crisis, were voting to continue their walkout.

The final vote of the workers was 11,354 for continuing the strike and 8,015 against. About 32,000 workers were on strike.

Communist support of the strikers' demands precipitated the threat to Ramadier's government and wracked Ramadier's Socialist Party with indecision.

KANSAS CITY, May 2 (AP) — Democrats in President Truman's home county joined a politically-inexperienced war hero's lead today to purge themselves of factionalism, particularly the Pendergast label, as they eyed the 1948 national election.

Thirty-six-year-old Harry A. Morris, twice decoratd in France for bravery in World War II, left scant doubt that heading off national party embarrassment in the presidential campaign was foremost behind his move to reorganize the Jackson County Democratic Committee.

All county party leaders, the young county chairman said, have agreed the Jackson County Democrats' political fortunes are "vitally important to the Democratic Party nationally, for the obvious reason that this county is the home of President Truman and is inevitably the target of intense national interest."

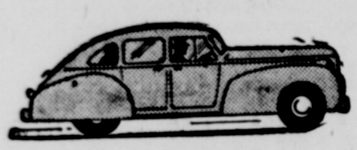

Morris—a lawyer who began his political career last August—has been working carefully behind the scenes for several months toward the reorganization. He had gained the support of two faction leaders, Frank Shannon, of Kansas City, and Mayor Roger T. Sermon, of the President's hometown of Independence.

He was given a clear field at a meeting with James M. Pendergast at the once famous Missouri political address of 1908 Main Street. There Pendergast agreed to go along with Shannon and Sermon in withdrawing members from the committee.

It was at this same address where the late T. J. Pendergast's nod in the "thirties" was tantamount to election for would-be governors and United States senators in Missouri, including the then United States Sen. Harry S. Truman. That was before the government's vote fraud and income tax evasion prosecutions which sent T. J. to federal prison and left his nephew, James, with only the remnants of his once powerful machine.

The average American family consumes about one and one-half pounds of spices annually, all of which are imported.

2 It's Self-Cleaning

Du Pont House Paint is so formulated that, as time goes by, a microscopically fine white powder forms on the surface. Heavy rains wash this powder away, taking dust and dirt with it, and leaving the surface clean and white again. (Excessive accumulations of dirt, particularly in sooty industrial communities, or in heavily shaded locations, may delay or interfere with this process.) Because this "self-cleaning" is gradual, the wearing qualities of the paint film are not abnormally affected.

Garsson Firm Typewriters Figure In War Fraud Trial

WASHINGTON, May 2 (AP) —The government introduced greatly magnified photographs of typed words and figures today to support its charge in the Garsson-May war fraud trial that fake papers were used to hide alleged bribes to ex-Congressman Andrew J. May.

Frank M. Miller, an FBI identification expert, demonstrated the pictures. He said they show that typewriters of Garsson munitions firms were used to prepare bills for lumber supposedly submitted by the Cumberland Lumber Company of Kentucky in which May was interested.

May, wartime chairman of the House Military Committee, Henry and Murray Garsson and Joseph F. Freeman, Garsson agent in Washington, are being tried jointly. The government alleges there was a conspiracy to buy May's influence. It charges that May received more than $50,000 from Garsson firms to finance the lumber company but failed to deliver any lumber.

May has denied he profited from his deals with the Garssons, and says his only interest was promoting the war effort.

Miller's testimony attacked documents supposedly showing legitimate transactions between Cumberland and two Garsson firms, the Erie Basin and Batavia Metal Products Companies.

Miller said he examined bills to Erie and Batavia from Cumberland and samples from Erie and Batavia typewriters, and found the typing on all had been done on the same machines.

One of the typewriters, a 12-year-old machine, was entered into evidence as were the photographs. Miller said defects in typed letters were alike both on the Cumberland invoices and the Erie and Batavia typewriter specimens.

The defense tried to shake Miller's findings on the point that the Cumberland invoices were dated two years before the FBI specimens were obtained. Miller replied that although typewriters usually acquire more defects with long use, he was sure the typing in this case was the same.

Charter Vote Will Be Held Monday

Residents of Bowling Green will vote this Monday from 7 to 10 p. m. on whether or not they approve the charter granted the community by the Legislature.

The charter would establish a special taxation district for Bowling Green, whose residents now pay only state and county taxes.

Balloting will be held at the Bowling Green filling station located at the corner of McMullen Highway and the old Cresap Road. C. M. Spiker, Lloyd E. Auman and Austin G. Snyder were named previously as a board of election supervisors in charge of the referendum voting.

Under terms of the enabling act passed by the recent session of the Legislature and signed by Gov. Lane, the charter would provide a minimum tax rate of 20 cents per $100 of real estate value, up to a maximum of 50 cents.

If the charter is approved, a nine-man board of managers, named in the bill, would carry on in a temporary capacity until the first annual meeting next January, when a permanent board would be elected.

Present members of the board are Samuel S. Smith, Calvin R. Ayers, J. Frederick Walton, George T. Steigerwald, Clement C. May, Evan L. Feltner, Ernest E. McCullough, Harold E. Northrup and Ellsworth F. Brewer.

A community meeting, attended by approximately 75 persons, was held last night at Circle Inn to discuss various points in the charter. Speakers included C. William Gilchrist and Edward J. Ryan, local attorneys.

U. S. Naval Force Greeted By Turks

ISTANBUL, Turkey, May 2 (AP)—An American naval force, fresh from Mediterranean maneuvers, rode at anchor tonight at the start of a five-day visit which Turks accepted happily as another manifestation of a friendship they want so badly.

This was the third time within a year that American warships have come to Turkey, whose guardianship of the Dardanelles has placed her face to face with Russian demands for a hand in control of the straits. It was the first time that an aircraft carrier ever had traversed the Dardanelles.

While the United States Navy insisted the stay here simply was a social call during a break in training exercises, the average Turk had other ideas, especially in view of the proposed American aid to their country.

Thousands of cheering peasants stood waving along the shores of the Dardanelles as the four-ship unit, including the 27,000-ton carrier Leyte, steamed toward Istanbul last night. Massed thousands stood with quiet interest as the craft dropped anchor just off famed old Dolma Bagchen Palace after an exchange of salutes with the Turkish port and warships this morning.

Martin Predicts House Approval Of Aid Bill

WASHINGTON, May 2— (AP) — Speaker Martin (R-Mass) predicted House passage "by a substantial majority" of the administration's $400,000,000 Greek-Turkish aid bill today as it squeaked through the Rules Committee on the way to the floor for action next week.

By the close vote of six to five, the Rules Committee cleared the way for nine hours of general debate, beginning Monday, under an "open rule"—procedure under which any sort of amendment may be offered.

Ahe action came after a last ditch attempt in closed session to hold up the measure indefinitely to obtain the views of Secretary of State Marshall against the background of the Moscow conference.

"Lippy" Durocher First Eulogized, Then Lampooned

Heavy rains wash this powder away, taking dust and dirt with it, and leaving the surface clean and white again. (Excessive accumulations of dirt, particularly in sooty industrial communities, or in heavily shaded locations, may delay or interfere with this peocess.) Because this "self-cleaning" is gradual, the wearing qualities of the paint film are not abnormally affected.

Greek Merchant Marine Visits Relatives Here, Describes War

John Valandasis, 22 Likes United States

By F. ALLAN WEATHERHOLT
News Staff Writer

Coming to the United States for the first time, John Valandasis, 22-year-old Greek Merchant Marine, spent one night here recently vilsiting his uncle, Michael Valandas, 220 Frederick Street, formerlly proprietor of the State and Star Restaurants here.

John sailed from Italy, after journeying overland from Greece, and said the trip across was made in 18 days. He is assigned to a former American Liberty Ship, now owned by his uncle, John Hajipateras. The ship is hauling coal from this country to European ports and was reloaded at Baltimore.

When Mike Valandas received word that his nephew was aboard the ship and had docked in Baltimore, he made arrangements for the young man to visit here.

John is an intelligent youth, who shows no marks of the long occupation of his homeland by the Germans and Italians, but he remembers the experience with a great deal of bitterness. He believes the future of Greece and other small European countries depends largely upon the American policy abroad. He hates the Russians almost as strongly as he dislikes the Italians and detests the Germans.

Speaks Only Greek

John speaks no English whatever, and interviewing him was somewhat of a task, since I speak no Greek, but I got on common ground through John's Uncle Mike, who asked and answered questions as a very able interpreter.

The story of this young Greek sailor, for guerrilla and sailor he was during the war, is probably not unlike that of many other young Greeks, who are the backbone of modern civilization in this tiny devastated country. John tells his story simply, frankly and honestly. He has learned to face the truth and to deal with it. He knows the meaning of such phrases as "freedom from fear" and "freedom from want". He knows what acute, nagging hunger is. He knows pain and suffering and disease and death.

Describing the heroic battle waged by the Greek Army, aided by the English early in the war to keep the Italians out of Greece, John said, "we held them for seven months, and it was only when the Germans came that we had to give ground."

John's home is at Pireaus, the largest Greek port just outside Athens. Uncle make explained, "it's like Cumberland and LaVale if LaVale was a seaport."

On October 28, 1940, John recalled the date, the first hint of actual conflict came to Greece. Italian planes flew over Athens and a couple of hours later returned and began bombing and strafing the city and the seaport. John remembers the date well. His baby brother, James, now nearly seven years old, was born during the air raid.

Many people were killed in that and subsequent Italian and German raids and sorties, John said. But the bombings were not as bad as the disease and starvation which followed the actual invasion.

When the Germans entered and occupied the country along with the Italians, the English Army, John explained, debarked hurriedly from Greece at a port about 30 miles from Athens, taking all their men and equipment with them. For several days thereafter, the Germans and Italians patrolled the whole country, searching cities, towns and villages for English soldiers. John, a little bitterly said, "they didn't find any. They all ran away and left the Greek Army to cover their retreat."

Describes Occupation

All Greeks were disarmed. Schools were closed. A puppet government was set up, all cattle and livestock, merchandise from stores and furnishings from homes, even clothing and personal possessions were taken and shipped to Germany and Italy. Soon nothing was left. John said for many months there was little or no food. For three months he and his family and neighbors existed entirely by eating a banana-like fruit which grows in Greece. Neither he nor Mike could place an English name on it, but declared, it is not ordinarily eaten and is good only for cattle food.

John said, "from my home to the market place, about 20-minutes walk, I counted as many as 40 dead in the streets, many times. Dead Greeks who had starved or were stricken by disease. I went daily to the market place hoping to buy or steal something to eat. But there was seldom anything."

Praises American Aid

Finally a system of rationing was set up, but it did not provide sufficient food and black market and inflation were rampant. "Had it not been for the Red Cross, and later UNRRA and now the Greek War Relief, there would be no Greeks left," John said with a grim face.

He described in detail activity of the Greek underground, the Greek patriots and the guerillas. Laughingly he said "we always tried to make the Germans think we were very dumb. For instance, one of my companions would beg a cigaret from a young German and then he would walk around to the headlights and pretend to try to light the cigaret from the electric head lamp. The Germans would laugh and think he was very dumb and maybe crazy. But soon the truck would have no air in the tires, and many things on the truck would be missing."

The Germans punished hi-jackers severely and usually just shot them. More often they were sent to Germany or elsewhere as slave labor. "The Germans and Italians didn't like each other," John continued, "and we soon learned to play one against the other. The Italians would laugh when we stole from the Germans, and the Germans would laugh when we stole from the Italians."

John has an amazing knowledge of the progress of the war, and talked about the conference between Roosevelt and Churchill and other leaders. He said the Greeks were given great courage when they would hear either of these two leaders on the radio. Then he explained that when the Germans ordered all radios turned in, about every other family, by agreement complied, so that only the poorest radios were confiscated. The rest went into the hills and underground, and were kept almost constantly tuned to London. Some people were allowed to have their radios, but they were banded to pick up only Rome and Berlin.

When the nation was disarmed, all the Greeks turned in some kind of weapons as directed by the Germans. But most of these were old war souvenirs which were useless and made even the stolid Germans laugh. The modern weapons went to the hills for the guerillas.

Trying To Rebuild

John said "the streets are now all cleared of the dead and debris. Athens is being remodeled as we get materials and tools. Schools are reopened. Stores are beginning to reappear, but there is still much sickness and much black market."

During the war, after the Germans began withdrawing from Greece, and the Italians had already capitulated, John served in the Greek Navy aboard an English mine sweeper, and holds an honorable discharge for his service. His family has always lived by the sea, and his father and older brother are now in the Merchant Marine, aboard ships plying between South Africa and England.

He wants to return to this country. He described America as "a wonderful place, with many good people." But he realizes coming here due to quotas etc., is difficult, so in the meantime, he is helping Greece rebuild by helping take to her the things she needs.

John said ships bringing supplies from America always bring good things, like tractors, trucks, clothing, food, cattle, machinery, and things that we need to be rebuild. "But," he added sadly shaking his head, "ships from England bring only shovels and more shovels, and maybe some stuff they do not want. But the Americans are very generous and have everything.

"Farms are being restocked with the finest breeds of cattle from Mexico," he explained, "and soon the farms will be productive again. But Greece was destroyed, except in the hearts of the people, and it will be many years before it is restored again," he explained.

John knew, by the grapevine, when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor. He knew about the Americans fighting in the Pacific and about the invasion in Europe. He heard it all himself on underground radios. "And we believed it all because the Americans did not lie to us at anytime, and the German radio was denying all these things."

Noticing the discharge emblem on our coat lapel, John said, "you were a soldier. You understand why a man fights. The Greeks honor the Americans. We love the Americans. Today there is much talk about another war, perhaps with Russia. The Greek people are weary of war. The Americans are tired of war. Maybe the Russians are tired of war too. But if war comes, Greece has many men who will help America."

VISITS UNCLE—John Valandasis, (top right, Athens, Greece, a member of the Greek Merchant Marine, spent a day visiting his uncle Michael Valandasis, 220 Frederick Street, while his ship was being loaded with coal and other supplies in Baltimore. This was his first voyage to the United States, and in an interview, he described conditions in Greece during the war and now. West Fined $500 On Conviction Of Common Assault

Not Guilty Of Attempted Rape

Ronald J. West, Hagerstown business man, was found guilty in Circuit Court here yesterday of a charge of common assault upon Miss Doris C. Everhart, 21, an attractive brunette also of Hagerstown, and was fined $500.

West had been indicted on two counts; assault with intent to rape and common assault. He was found not guilty on the first charge, but was declared guilty on the second count.

Miss Everhart charged that she was assaulted by West while he was taking her home from a drinking party at his house, on August 3, 1946, and that she was also attacked by West's large police dog which bit her on the thighs and body. The young woman said while enroute to her home, West stopped his car and put his arm around her. She struggled and the pair fought. She said he made no other improper statements or advances to her, but when she attempted to get out of the car they fought.

She told a clear and concise story but admitted she did not remember all of the details. Other witnesses said the girl was badly mauled, scratched and bruised when they found her, and was partially nude, her clothing badly torn.

West Tells Of Incident

West testified that he started to take the girl home and after driving several hundred yards, stopped and put his arm around her. She immediately became hysterical, he stated, and tried to get out of the car.

The defendant explained he held her by the hair and drove on, with the idea of getting her home as quickly as possible. After the car reached the main highway, he said, Miss Everhart continued to struggle and fell from the car to the highway. West declared he tried to get her back into the car, but she screamed and fought. In the excitement, his dog, which had followed him from the car, jumped on the girl, bit her, tore her clothes and also tore his clothes.

West said he finally got the hysterical girl back into the car and returned to his own home, went in the house and told his friends that she refused to go home. He denied attacking her, or attempting to rape her, saying she became hysterical when he put his arm around her and they struggled for sometime.

Full Bench Presides

Chief Judge William A. Huster and Associate Judges George Henderson and Joseph D. Mish, Hagerstown, presided at the trial, with the case tried before the Court.

West was indicted last November by the grand jury in Washington County and had the case removed here, on grounds that he "could not receive a fair and impartial trial" in Hagerstown. The trial was set for the January term here, but was deferred because his attorney, Kenneth McLaughlin, was elected to the State Senate and had to attend sessions of the Maryland Assembly. McLaughlin was assisted in the defense by former State Senator William A. Gunter, this city.

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris was aided in the prosecution by State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram, of Washington County.

Had "Drinking Party"

Defense counsel sought to show that a "drinking party" had been held that night at the West home and that Miss Everhart "had too much to drink and became ill." West volunteered to take her home, and it was admitted that his police dog, which was in the car, had attacked the girl.

Richard Long testified that West first asked him to drive the girl home, but that Mrs. Long didn't want to leave, so he gave the car keys back to West. Later, Long said, he found the girl lying along the road near the house, with her clothing torn. She was bleeding about the thighs and body, Long added. He quoted West as saying: "The dog did it," and asking him what he should do. Long said he advised West to shoot the dog, but neither of them did so.

Among the witnesses summoned were Sgt. Wayne Sellman, of the Hagerstown police, and Dr. E. W. Ditto, Hagerstown, who examined the girl at the Washington County Hospital. Mrs. Pauline Long, Lee Greenfield, Mrs. Hazel Shaw, Jodn Rohrer, and Rudd J. West.

All veterans, their families and friends are invited to attend the service, which will climax the observance of Mother's Day.

Hottinger Arrested After Gun Battle

A young Virginia veteran, whom Garrett County authorities said engaged in a "life-and-death" struggle with the proprietor of a service station that he was caught robbing yesterday, was ordered held in the Oakland Jail in default of $1,500 bond for September grand jury.

Identified as Wilson L. Hottinger, 22, Garrett County Sheriff J. S. Teats said the youth is charged with breaking and entering, committing larceny and assault with intent to kill. Hottinger pleaded guilty to the first two counts but denied that he tried to kill John Bechtel, when the service station proprietor found him looting the place near Red House at 4 a. m., Thursday.

Trap Intruder

Sheriff Teats explained that Hottinger broke into the station and Bechtel, about 50, who resides 30 feet from his business, heard the intruder. He got out of bed, according to police, aroused his son and the two took rifles and trapped Hottinger inside the station.

When ordered to come out Hottinger climbed out the window by which he had entered. Bechtel saw that the man was carrying a revolver and grasped him, the sheriff said, adding the two engaged in a "terrific struggle."

Hottinger fired his revolver once but the bullet didn't strike Bechtel or his son, and finally Hottinger broke away and fled. He was apprehended 11 hours later by State troopers and county authorities as he was riding in a car on Route 50 not far from the scene of the shooting.

As Hottinger fled from Bechtel the son began firing and authorities said there was a bullet hole in his pants leg when apprehended and a gaping wound in the right arm. State Police said they were not yet sure the arm wound had been caused by a bullet.

Sheriff Teats explained that Hottinger was accompanied by Mrs. Leafa Olinger, 23, Linville, Va., and her 4-year-old son. The woman and child were waiting nearby in an automobile when Hottinger entered the filling station, according to authorities, and were discovered after the confessed robber fled. Mrs. Olinger, who will be returned to Virginia, told investigating officers that she did not know her escort had planned to rob the station, nor did he give any reason for leaving the car. No charges were preferred against her, the sheriff declared.

Admits Other Robberies

Hottinger also admitted committing several robberies between Linville and Garrett County during the two weeks that he and Mrs. Olinger were "traveling," Sheriff Teats said. The sheriff expects several detainers to be filed against the Virginia veteran by Virginia and West Virginia authorities.

After the would-be robber broke and fled from Bechtel, police said, State Trooper Milton G. Hart and Deputy Sheriff Paul W. Fisher began searching the roads in Garrett County. Hottinger told police that he traveled west for a while, but reversed his direction and began to go east, hitch-hiking rides. He had been given a ride, when police spotted him in the car and arrested him.

During the fight with Bechtel, the sheriff said Hottinger picked up a wrench and struck the proprietor over the head. When the fugitive was apprehended, state police said he was suffering from a cut on the head which he received in the fight.

Hottinger was arraigned before Magistrate H. A. Loraditch in Oakland.

Liquor Board Issues

the nine new licenses the Board was permitted to issue.

Crowe said yesterday that the fact that these nine were selected does not indicate that all the others were not eligible for licenses or that their failure to get licenses indicates anything wrong with their character. In most cases he explained, their locations had much to do with their failure to be selected.

When these nine were summoned before the Board they were told quite frankly by Crowe that the Board expressed a great deal of confindence in them individually to conduct their places properly. Crowe said, "If I hear a single complaint about any of these places, I shall personally come down and lift your licenses. There are many other applicants who were equally eligible, but some had to be disappointed."

Following is a recapitulation of all licenses issued:

ORDER OF P

West Fined $500 On Conviction Of Common Assault

Not Guilty Of Attempted Rape

Ronald J. West, Hagerstown business man, was found guilty in Circuit Court here yesterday of a charge of common assault upon Miss Doris C. Everhart, 21, an attractive brunette also of Hagerstown, and was fined $500.

West had been indicted on two counts; assault with intent to rape and common assault. He was found not guilty on the first charge, but was declared guilty on the second count.

Miss Everhart charged that she was assaulted by West while he was taking her home from a drinking party at his house, on August 3, 1946, and that she was also attacked by West's large police dog which bit her on the thighs and body. The young woman said while enroute to her home, West stopped his car and put his arm around her. She struggled and the pair fought. She said he made no other improper statements or advances to her, but when she attempted to get out of the car they fought.

She told a clear and concise story but admitted she did not remember all of the details. Other witnesses said the girl was badly mauled, scratched and bruised when they found her, and was partially nude, her clothing badly torn.

West Tells Of Incident

West testified that he started to take the girl home and after driving several hundred yards, stopped and put his arm around her. She immediately became hysterical, he stated, and tried to get out of the car.

The defendant explained he held her by the hair and drove on, with the idea of getting her home as quickly as possible. After the car reached the main highway, he said, Miss Everhart continued to struggle and fell from the car to the highway. West declared he tried to get her back into the car, but she screamed and fought. In the excitement, his dog, which had followed him from the car, jumped on the girl, bit her, tore her clothes and also tore his clothes.

West said he finally got the hysterical girl back into the car and returned to his own home, went in the house and told his friends that she refused to go home. He denied attacking her, or attempting to rape her, saying she became hysterical when he put his arm around her and they struggled for sometime.

Full Bench Presides

Chief Judge William A. Huster and Associate Judges George Henderson and Joseph D. Mish, Hagerstown, presided at the trial, with the case tried before the Court.

West was indicted last November by the grand jury in Washington County and had the case removed here, on grounds that he "could not receive a fair and impartial trial" in Hagerstown. The trial was set for the January term here, but was deferred because his attorney, Kenneth McLaughlin, was elected to the State Senate and had to attend sessions of the Maryland Assembly. McLaughlin was assisted in the defense by former State Senator William A. Gunter, this city.

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris was aided in the prosecution by State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram, of Washington County.

Had "Drinking Party"

Defense counsel sought to show that a "drinking party" had been held that night at the West home and that Miss Everhart "had too much to drink and became ill." West volunteered to take her home, and it was admitted that his police dog, which was in the car, had attacked the girl.

Richard Long testified that West first asked him to drive the girl home, but that Mrs. Long didn't want to leave, so he gave the car keys back to West. Later, Long said, he found the girl lying along the road near the house, with her clothing torn. She was bleeding about the thighs and body, Long added. He quoted West as saying: "The dog did it," and asking him what he should do. Long said he advised West to shoot the dog, but neither of them did so.

Among the witnesses summoned were Sgt. Wayne Sellman, of the Hagerstown police, and Dr. E. W. Ditto, Hagerstown, who examined the girl at the Washington County Hospital. Mrs. Pauline Long, Lee Greenfield, Mrs. Hazel Shaw, Jodn Rohrer, and Rudd J. West.

Hottinger Arrested After Gun Battle

A young Virginia veteran, whom Garrett County authorities said engaged in a "life-and-death" struggle with the proprietor of a service station that he was caught robbing yesterday, was ordered held in the Oakland Jail in default of $1,500 bond for September grand jury.

Identified as Wilson L. Hottinger, 22, Garrett County Sheriff J. S. Teats said the youth is charged with breaking and entering, committing larceny and assault with intent to kill. Hottinger pleaded guilty to the first two counts but denied that he tried to kill John Bechtel, when the service station proprietor found him looting the place near Red House at 4 a. m., Thursday.

Trap Intruder

Sheriff Teats explained that Hottinger broke into the station and Bechtel, about 50, who resides 30 feet from his business, heard the intruder. He got out of bed, according to police, aroused his son and the two took rifles and trapped Hottinger inside the station.

When ordered to come out Hottinger climbed out the window by which he had entered. Bechtel saw that the man was carrying a revolver and grasped him, the sheriff said, adding the two engaged in a "terrific struggle."

Hottinger fired his revolver once but the bullet didn't strike Bechtel or his son, and finally Hottinger broke away and fled. He was apprehended 11 hours later by State troopers and county authorities as he was riding in a car on Route 50 not far from the scene of the shooting.

As Hottinger fled from Bechtel the son began firing and authorities said there was a bullet hole in his pants leg when apprehended and a gaping wound in the right arm. State Police said they were not yet sure the arm wound had been caused by a bullet.

Sheriff Teats explained that Hottinger was accompanied by Mrs. Leafa Olinger, 23, Linville, Va., and her 4-year-old son. The woman and child were waiting nearby in an automobile when Hottinger entered the filling station, according to authorities, and were discovered after the confessed robber fled. Mrs. Olinger, who will be returned to Virginia, told investigating officers that she did not know her escort had planned to rob the station, nor did he give any reason for leaving the car. No charges were preferred against her, the sheriff declared.

Admits Other Robberies

Hottinger also admitted committing several robberies between Linville and Garrett County during the two weeks that he and Mrs. Olinger were "traveling," Sheriff Teats said. The sheriff expects several detainers to be filed against the Virginia veteran by Virginia and West Virginia authorities.

After the would-be robber broke and fled from Bechtel, police said, State Trooper Milton G. Hart and Deputy Sheriff Paul W. Fisher began searching the roads in Garrett County. Hottinger told police that he traveled west for a while, but reversed his direction and began to go east, hitch-hiking rides. He had been given a ride, when police spotted him in the car and arrested him.

During the fight with Bechtel, the sheriff said Hottinger picked up a wrench and struck the proprietor over the head. When the fugitive was apprehended, state police said he was suffering from a cut on the head which he received in the fight.

Hottinger was arraigned before Magistrate H. A. Loraditch in Oakland.

Liquor Board Issues

the nine new licenses the Board was permitted to issue.

Crowe said yesterday that the fact that these nine were selected does not indicate that all the others were not eligible for licenses or that their failure to get licenses indicates anything wrong with their character. In most cases he explained, their locations had much to do with their failure to be selected.

When these nine were summoned before the Board they were told quite frankly by Crowe that the Board expressed a great deal of confindence in them individually to conduct their places properly. Crowe said, "If I hear a single complaint about any of these places, I shall personally come down and lift your licenses. There are many other applicants who were equally eligible, but some had to be disappointed."

Following is a recapitulation of all licenses issued:

Market, Spurred By Motors, Scores Third Straight Average Recovery

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—Assorted motors and special issues provided a bullish spur for today's stock market which, despite many exceptions, recorded its third straight average recovery.

Chrysler was the day's strong spot. It opened 20 minutes late on a 6,000-share block, up 5½ points, soon extended this to 9⅝ and ended with a net gain of 8¼ at 100⅝.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was up .5 of a point at 62.9, duplicating the swings of Wednesday and Thursday. Of 946 issues registering, 646 Rose and 250 fell.

Eastman Kodak added five at 240 on meager sales, American Can 2¼ at 93⅝, General Motors 1¾ at 58⅝ and Norfolk and Western one at 229. Lesser gainers included Studebaker, United States Steel, Bethlehem, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Kennecott, Union Carbide, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Socony, Standard Oil (NJ) (which lost most of a forenoon climb on the announcement of a big secondary offering of the stock), American Woolen, Pepsi-Cola and Allied Chemical.

The bond market jogged over a narrow price route today and closed with advances and declines in close balance.

Eckhart Baptist Church Receives Electric Organ

Instrument To Be Installed Soon

By RUDOLPH NICKEL

FROSTBURG, May 2—The Eckhart Baptist Church has received a new Hammond electric organ which will be installed next week. The instrument was purchased at a cost of $2,292 and the church has accumulated an organ fund amounting to approximately $2,500. The amount in excess of the cost of the organ will be used, according to Rev. Sidney S. Aldrich, pastor, to purchase additional equipment for the church, possibly altar furniture.

The congregation has arranged a public organ recital for Tuesday, May 27, at 8 p. m., when Prof. John H. Ettermann, prominent Baltimore organist, will present a program of sacred and classical music on the new instrument.

The Eckhart Baptist congregation voted to purchase the organ at a meeting April 14, 1946, when pledges amounting to $1,500 were received from individuals, in addition to a donation of $500 in cash given by the Sunday school the same evening, making a total of $2,000 with which to begin the organ fund. Rev. Mr. Aldrich stated that three members of the congregation gave $300 each and four others contributed $100 each. The balance of the money was given in smaller amounts with the result that approximately $2,500 was on hand by the end of September.

Other improvements at the church during the past year include landscaping the churchyard at a cost of $170; replacement of an old piano by a newer one for the use of the Sunday school; a new library containing valuable books for the use of Sunday school pupils, and retaining valuable books for the use of the interior of the church structure.

Officers of the church are William H. Kreitzburg, senior deacon; and five deacons who are also on the board of trustees, F. Earl Kreitzburg, John Watson, Enoch Logsdon, Thomas Lewis and Edwin Elias, Sr., the later being chairman of the board of trustees. Other trustees are Morris Myers, Melvin Muir and Harold Dudley; Mrs. Leah Rephann, financial secretary; Edwin Elias, Sr., treasurer; Miss Kate Bannatyne, clerk; Mrs. Mollie Bannatyne and Miss Kate Bannatyne, deaconesses.

Legislative Data Secured On Funds For New Hospital

By GEORGE H. HANST

OAKLAND, May 2—As the fund for the hospital was increased by $1,688 this week, information regarding completion of final plans and the status of the law under which federal funds are to be made available was obtained by E. Ray Jones, one of the executors of the will of the late George W. Loar.

Conferring with Congressman J. Glenn Beall, Ray discovered that the bill under which these funds will be made available had already passed the House and is now in a Senate committee, with expectation that it will be reported out and passed within a short time.

Bill Is Changed

Jones said the bill had been changed from its original form in which a definite amount was provided for each of five years. As passed by the House, the bill now provides for $150 million for 1947 and 1948, and also that approved applications for construction funds shall constitute a contractual obligation of the federal government to the extent of one-third of the approved cost of construction.

To obtain approval of applications for federal funds, Ray learned, local funds to the extent of $2 for each $1 of federal funds applied for must be available, and plans for the hospital must be approved by the Surgeon General of the United States, with assurance that funds will be available to maintain and operate the hospital, once it is constructed.

It was not believed, however, that Garrett County would have any particular difficulty about this, as plans which have been drawn have the approval of the State Department of Health. Mr. Loar, in his will, left $170,000 for the hospital, and the County Commissioners, through a county-wide committee, have already raised $86,000 in addition, with the goal now set at $100,000.

County High On List

The architects and engineers advised Jones that plans for the main part of the building were practically completed and it was expected that James J. Baldwin, architect, would bring them to Oakland next week for final approval, after which they would be submitted to contractors for bids. He said plans are also being drawn for the proposed addition and it was expected that these would be completed within the next two or three weeks, so that alternate bids can be obtained on the main or original part of the building, and the main part and the proposed addition.

Members of the Maryland Hospital Planning Commission told Jones that the hospital survey for Maryland had been completed and recommendations made relative to the standing of various communities interested in erection of hospitals, and that Garrett County had been placed high on the priority list and stood an excellent chance of receiving first consideration when it came to the allocation of Maryland's share of the federal hospital funds.

The county chairman of the campaign to raise the local funds announced a definite pledge of $1,200 this week for a semi-private room in the proposed addition, in memory of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Stone Talson, a summer resident of Mt. Lake Park for many years.

Jury Returns Verdict Of $5,000 In Alienation Of Affections Suit

By LUKE McDOWELL

KEYSER, W. Va., May 2—A verdict for $5,000 damages was returned by a jury in Mineral County Circuit Court today in favor of Abner M. Tyler against Horace F. Menefee, 59, a B. and O. Railroad Company yardmaster, for alienation of the affections of Tyler's wife, Mrs. Pearl Tyler. The jury deliberated almost two hours.

Tyler had sued for $10,000 damages, claiming Menefee had alienated the affections of his wife. The case went to the jury yesterday afternoon at 3 p. m., but after the jurors had deliberated for half an hour Judge Ernest A. See excused them until this morning.

During the testimony yesterday afternoon Quinton Roderick, employed as a switchman by the B. and O., said he saw Menefee and Mrs. Tyler board passenger trains together on three different occasions in 1945.

Tyler denied he ever treated his wife cruelly and said he never "laid a hand on her when he was angry." Mrs. Tyler had said he was cruel and caused her mental torture.

Following announcement of the jury's verdict, Vernon E. Rankin, attorney for Menefee, asked the court to set aside the verdict and order a new trial. Judge See took no action on the request.

Wins Damage Suit

In a damage suit in which Mrs. Anne Odell Bright, Romney, sought $273.64 from Bernie Lee Strauderman, Wiley Ford, for damages to her car caused when the car collided with a truck owned and operated by Strauderman on Route 28, near Ridgeley, in February, 1946, a jury returned a verdict in favor of Mrs. Bright for the sum asked.

Eckhart Baptist Church Receives Electric Organ

By RUDOLPH NICKEL

FROSTBURG, May 2—The Eckhart Baptist Church has received a new Hammond electric organ which will be installed next week. The instrument was purchased at a cost of $2,292 and the church has accumulated an organ fund amounting to approximately $2,500. The amount in excess of the cost of the organ will be used, according to Rev. Sidney S. Aldrich, pastor, to purchase additional equipment for the church, possibly altar furniture.

The congregation has arranged a public organ recital for Tuesday, May 27, at 8 p. m., when Prof. John H. Ettermann, prominent Baltimore organist, will present a program of sacred and classical music on the new instrument.

The Eckhart Baptist congregation voted to purchase the organ at a meeting April 14, 1946, when pledges amounting to $1,500 were received from individuals, in addition to a donation of $500 in cash given by the Sunday school the same evening, making a total of $2,000 with which to begin the organ fund. Rev. Mr. Aldrich stated that three members of the congregation gave $300 each and four others contributed $100 each. The balance of the money was given in smaller amounts with the result that approximately $2,500 was on hand by the end of September.

Other improvements at the church during the past year include landscaping the churchyard at a cost of $170; replacement of an old piano by a newer one for the use of the Sunday school; a new library containing valuable books for the use of Sunday school pupils, and retaining valuable books for the use of the interior of the church structure.

Officers of the church are William H. Kreitzburg, senior deacon; and five deacons who are also on the board of trustees, F. Earl Kreitzburg, John Watson, Enoch Logsdon, Thomas Lewis and Edwin Elias, Sr., the later being chairman of the board of trustees. Other trustees are Morris Myers, Melvin Muir and Harold Dudley; Mrs. Leah Rephann, financial secretary; Edwin Elias, Sr., treasurer; Miss Kate Bannatyne, clerk; Mrs. Mollie Bannatyne and Miss Kate Bannatyne, deaconesses.

Legislative Data Secured On Funds For New Hospital

By GEORGE H. HANST

OAKLAND, May 2—As the fund for the hospital was increased by $1,688 this week, information regarding completion of final plans and the status of the law under which federal funds are to be made available was obtained by E. Ray Jones, one of the executors of the will of the late George W. Loar.

Conferring with Congressman J. Glenn Beall, Ray discovered that the bill under which these funds will be made available had already passed the House and is now in a Senate committee, with expectation that it will be reported out and passed within a short time.

Bill Is Changed

Jones said the bill had been changed from its original form in which a definite amount was provided for each of five years. As passed by the House, the bill now provides for $150 million for 1947 and 1948, and also that approved applications for construction funds shall constitute a contractual obligation of the federal government to the extent of one-third of the approved cost of construction.

To obtain approval of applications for federal funds, Ray learned, local funds to the extent of $2 for each $1 of federal funds applied for must be available, and plans for the hospital must be approved by the Surgeon General of the United States, with assurance that funds will be available to maintain and operate the hospital, once it is constructed.

It was not believed, however, that Garrett County would have any particular difficulty about this, as plans which have been drawn have the approval of the State Department of Health. Mr. Loar, in his will, left $170,000 for the hospital, and the County Commissioners, through a county-wide committee, have already raised $86,000 in addition, with the goal now set at $100,000.

County High On List

The architects and engineers advised Jones that plans for the main part of the building were practically completed and it was expected that James J. Baldwin, architect, would bring them to Oakland next week for final approval, after which they would be submitted to contractors for bids. He said plans are also being drawn for the proposed addition and it was expected that these would be completed within the next two or three weeks, so that alternate bids can be obtained on the main or original part of the building, and the main part and the proposed addition.

Members of the Maryland Hospital Planning Commission told Jones that the hospital survey for Maryland had been completed and recommendations made relative to the standing of various communities interested in erection of hospitals, and that Garrett County had been placed high on the priority list and stood an excellent chance of receiving first consideration when it came to the allocation of Maryland's share of the federal hospital funds.

The county chairman of the campaign to raise the local funds announced a definite pledge of $1,200 this week for a semi-private room in the proposed addition, in memory of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Stone Talson, a summer resident of Mt. Lake Park for many years.

Jury Returns Verdict Of $5,000 In Alienation Of Affections Suit

By LUKE McDOWELL

KEYSER, W. Va., May 2—A verdict for $5,000 damages was returned by a jury in Mineral County Circuit Court today in favor of Abner M. Tyler against Horace F. Menefee, 59, a B. and O. Railroad Company yardmaster, for alienation of the affections of Tyler's wife, Mrs. Pearl Tyler. The jury deliberated almost two hours.

Tyler had sued for $10,000 damages, claiming Menefee had alienated the affections of his wife. The case went to the jury yesterday afternoon at 3 p. m., but after the jurors had deliberated for half an hour Judge Ernest A. See excused them until this morning.

During the testimony yesterday afternoon Quinton Roderick, employed as a switchman by the B. and O., said he saw Menefee and Mrs. Tyler board passenger trains together on three different occasions in 1945.

Tyler denied he ever treated his wife cruelly and said he never "laid a hand on her when he was angry." Mrs. Tyler had said he was cruel and caused her mental torture.

Following announcement of the jury's verdict, Vernon E. Rankin, attorney for Menefee, asked the court to set aside the verdict and order a new trial. Judge See took no action on the request.

Keyser Officials Plan For Bridge And New Fire Hall

By LUKE McDOWELL

KEYSER, W. Va., May 2—Definite plans for the Mineral Street approach of the proposed overhead interstate bridge, will be presented to the Mayor and City Council here by May 15, it was stated after a conference between city officials and members of the West Virginia State Roads Commission in the city offices.

Officials explained the Keyser terminal of the proposed bridge will begin at street level, near Center Street, where it intersects Mineral Street. This is at a point where the city owns a lot on which it is planned to erect a city fire department building.

Before definite plans for the fire department structure can be completed, it will be necessary to know the location and elevations of the approach to the bridge at that point, city officials contend.

Mayor John C. Freeland said today that as soon as plans for the approach to the bridge are received, plans for the new fire hall will be completed and advertisements published asking for bids on its construction.

CONTROL

Any good pitcher will tell you that it isn't hard to make a baseball "do things." Curves and drops and knuckle balls can be mastered by almost anyone who wants to learn to pitch.

But CONTROL! There is the genius of great pitching. To be able to throw a ball exactly where you want it to go—that is an art.

Control is the all-important factor in living, too. "Self-control" we usually call it. Its mastery crowns life with nobility. By it men become strong, courageous, morally fit. Wherever it is exercised, life becomes richer in the qualities that make for lasting happiness.

The Church begins in childhood to teach us "self-control." It implants in the minds of youth both a Way of Life and the will to noble living. Then through our adult years, by revealing the truths of God and the Bible, the Church provides men with the spiritual foundation for an enriched life.

With your whole family, attend church regularly and support the Church.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend and support the church of his choice. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to Church on Sunday and read your Bible daily.

CONTROL

Any good pitcher will tell you that it isn't hard to make a baseball "do things." Curves and drops and knuckle balls can be mastered by almost anyone who wants to learn to pitch.

But CONTROL! There is the genius of great pitching. To be able to throw a ball exactly where you want it to go—that is an art.

Control is the all-important factor in living, too. "Self-control" we usually call it. Its mastery crowns life with nobility. By it men become strong, courageous, morally fit. Wherever it is exercised, life becomes richer in the qualities that make for lasting happiness.

The Church begins in childhood to teach us "self-control." It implants in the minds of youth both a Way of Life and the will to noble living. Then through our adult years, by revealing the truths of God and the Bible, the Church provides men with the spiritual foundation for an enriched life.

With your whole family, attend church regularly and support the Church.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . .
ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend and support the church of his choice. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to Church on Sunday and read your Bible daily.

Field Of 14 To Start In Kentucky Derby

Phalanx, Faultless Are Co-Favorites

Jet Pilot Touted As Best "Mudder"

By SID FEDER

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2 (AP) — They are running the biggest Kentucky Derby of them all at picturesque Churchill Downs tomorrow, with Phalanx and Faultless as the glamour gallopers in a field of 14 three-year-olds, and a vast throng of 125,000 expected to sit in on the festivities.

This is the smallest field to run for the roses and the $100,000 since Count Fleet scared all but nine others off just four years ago. And you have to go back even farther than that, to Shut Out's derby five years ago, at least, to come up with a Derby as wide open as this one is going to be when "My Old Kentucky Home" drifts over the downs at 5:45 p. m. (Central Standard Time) tomorrow to call them onto the track.

Balheim Becomes 14th

There were supposed to be only 13 in this field up to this morning. Then the usual "long shot sleeper" turned up in the entry box in the form of the reformed selling plater from Indiana, Balheim, a 200 to 1 winter book opportunity, and the field was full.

But it was not nearly as full as derbytown this time.

Back on its first full-scale peacetime basis, with OPA price restrictions off, a visit to Col. Matt Winn's gaudy gallop this time required a healthy bankroll, which will require important blood transfusions after the trip, what with $25-a-day hotel rooms, dollar sandwiches and coffee, $60 box seats if you dealt with the speculators, and even baby-sitters raising their rates.

As usual, though, the customers were no more perturbed over these conditions than were Phalanx, the "Gentleman from Virginia," or Faultless, who could be Trainer Ben Jones' fourth derby winner, were over their chances, in the run for the roses.

They came by the hundreds and by the thousands, by plane and train and car and wagon, and plain "shank's mare." They had Louisville bulging at the seams, as one of the great crowds of American sports history piled in for this 73rd edition of the Derby.

Winner To Get $93,160

There was the usual Derby glory waiting at the finish of the tough mile-and-a-quarter grind, and there was a huge pot of gold, second largest in Derby history. An additional $460 in "small change" was even thrown into the pot at the last minute today, making it a gross of $121,210 and a winner's pay-check of $93,160.

The $460, incidentally, was the result of a Kentucky racing commission rule which requires distribution among other races on a program of any purse money which would have been paid for a race that does not fill in the same program. Four of the scheduled races on the Derby card, which gets under way at 11:30 a. m. failed to fill and had to be substituted with cheaper events.

Jet Pilot Likes Mud

The weatherman obligingly came up with "fair and warmer," which could make the going fast by the time Starter Ruby White gives them "come on, now."

But it has been muddy here for two days now, and it was threatening again today, a matter which was welcomed no end by Silent Tom Smith, the one-time cowboy from Georgia.

Silent Tom trains Jet Pilot, the $41,000 "cosmetics kid" from the barn of lipstick princess Elizabeth (Arden) Graham, and The Pilot, the high-speed front-runner of this field, loves mud as much as oats.

He proved that on Derby Day last year, right on this race track, when he waltzed in by nine lengths in his first start. As a result, he is third choice in this field.

Arcaro Seeks Fourth

One other starter in this field, Phalanx, also broke his maiden on Derby Day last year. That was at New York, and the colt who sets fire to the stretch went on to win four more races and $57,110. Victor in the Wood Memorial two weeks ago, he became one of the shorter-priced winter book choices the Derby has ever seen.

He'll be ridden this time by heady Eddie Arcaro, the Newport, Ky., veteran ace, and Eddie will be all out, because he's shooting at his fourth necklace of roses in this one.

Fort Hill-LaSalle To Clash On May 12

Wet grounds at Fort Hill yesterday forced the postponement of the intra-city baseball game between Fort Hill High School and LaSalle High School.

Coach John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh said the game has been rescheduled for Monday, May 12.

Ann Curtis Ties World's Record

Ann Curtis

Miss Curtis, swimming the 100-yards in 59.4 seconds, equalled the official world's record held by F. Nathansen of Denmark.

Miss Zimmerman's time of 2:31.2 in the first preliminary heat stood as a new American and AAU meet standard because the 200-yard backstroke is new this year in indoor competition.

The qualifiers for tonight's finals in the backstroke in addition to the Misses Mellon, Zimmerman, Olson and Jensen were Donna Maddock, San Francisco, and Norah Kirkpatrick, Vancouver, B. C.

Ridgeley Church Fetes Champions

Calvary Methodist Floormen Honored

Calvary Methodist Church honored its YMCA Sunday School Basketball League champions with a dinner last night at the church in Ridgeley.

Ralph Hoelzer, manager of the team, served as toastmaster, and the invocation was given by the Rev. R. L. Greyonds, pastor. A ham dinner was served the 34 guests.

Clifton Van Roby, physical director of the "Y", referred to Calvary Methodist as "one of the finest in the history of the league," adding that the church should be proud of having a team win the trophy after playing only three years. The speaker said that a 10-point win was considered a close game in he eyes of the Calvary five. In conclusion he said that Hoelzer's interest in the team was a great help to the team's fine play as was the able coaching of James Lindsay.

Hoezler then presented jackets to the five boys. Inscribed on the back of the jackets were the words "Calvary Methodist 1947 Champions." Each boy's first name was lettered on the front.

Jesse Riggleman, Ridgeley High coach, expressed the hope that the four boys he will get from Calvary would defeat Allegany High and Ronald Hoelzer, the Calvary first stringer, who goes to the Camper squad, when those boys are playing first team ball.

Riggleman said he was glad to see Ridgeley get some recognition and thought that now Cumberland would "give Ridgeley citizenship papers and not consider them foreigners." He stressed that Ridgeley will profit from Sunday School League competition as the boys will now lose their fear of "teams scross the river."

John Borchert, Potomac State School student, said that the Calvary records of 17 consecutive league wins probably will never be equalled. He stated that competition in the league was keen the past season but the power of Calvary led observers to believe the league had weakened.

Louis Borchert showed movies on the playing of baseball and the making of sporting equipment.

Phalanx, Faultless Are Co-Favorites

By SID FEDER

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2 (AP) — They are running the biggest Kentucky Derby of them all at picturesque Churchill Downs tomorrow, with Phalanx and Faultless as the glamour gallopers in a field of 14 three-year-olds, and a vast throng of 125,000 expected to sit in on the festivities.

This is the smallest field to run for the roses and the $100,000 since Count Fleet scared all but nine others off just four years ago. And you have to go back even farther than that, to Shut Out's derby five years ago, at least, to come up with a Derby as wide open as this one is going to be when "My Old Kentucky Home" drifts over the downs at 5:45 p. m. (Central Standard Time) tomorrow to call them onto the track.

Balheim Becomes 14th

There were supposed to be only 13 in this field up to this morning. Then the usual "long shot sleeper" turned up in the entry box in the form of the reformed selling plater from Indiana, Balheim, a 200 to 1 winter book opportunity, and the field was full.

But it was not nearly as full as derbytown this time.

Back on its first full-scale peacetime basis, with OPA price restrictions off, a visit to Col. Matt Winn's gaudy gallop this time required a healthy bankroll, which will require important blood transfusions after the trip, what with $25-a-day hotel rooms, dollar sandwiches and coffee, $60 box seats if you dealt with the speculators, and even baby-sitters raising their rates.

As usual, though, the customers were no more perturbed over these conditions than were Phalanx, the "Gentleman from Virginia," or Faultless, who could be Trainer Ben Jones' fourth derby winner, were over their chances, in the run for the roses.

They came by the hundreds and by the thousands, by plane and train and car and wagon, and plain "shank's mare." They had Louisville bulging at the seams, as one of the great crowds of American sports history piled in for this 73rd edition of the Derby.

There was the usual Derby glory waiting at the finish of the tough mile-and-a-quarter grind, and there was a huge pot of gold, second largest in Derby history. An additional $460 in "small change" was even thrown into the pot at the last minute today, making it a gross of $121,210 and a winner's pay-check of $93,160.

The $460, incidentally, was the result of a Kentucky racing commission rule which requires distribution among other races on a program of any purse money which would have been paid for a race that does not fill in the same program. Four of the scheduled races on the Derby card, which gets under way at 11:30 a. m. failed to fill and had to be substituted with chesper events.

Jet Pilot Likes Mud

The weatherman obligingly came up with "fair and warmer," which could make the going fast by the time Starter Ruby White gives them "come on, now."

But it has been muddy here for two days now, and it was threatening again today, a matter which was welcomed no end by Silent Tom Smith, the one-time cowboy from Georgia.

Silent Tom trains Jet Pilot, the $41,000 "cosmetics kid" from the barn of lipstick princess Elizabeth (Arden) Graham, and The Pilot, the high-speed front-runner of this field, loves mud as much as oats.

He proved that on Derby Day last year, right on this race track, when he waltzed in by nine lengths in his first start. As a result, he is third choice in this field.

Arcaro Seeks Fourth

One other starter in this field, Phalanx, also broke his maiden on Derby Day last year. That was at New York, and the colt who sets fire to the stretch went on to win four more races and $57,110. Victor in the Wood Memorial two weeks ago, he became one of the shorter-priced winter book choices the Derby has ever seen.

He'll be ridden this time by heady Eddie Arcaro, the Newport, Ky., veteran ace, and Eddie will be all out, because he's shooting at his fourth necklace of roses in this one.

Fort Hill-LaSalle To Clash On May 12

Wet grounds at Fort Hill yesterday forced the postponement of the intra-city baseball game between Fort Hill High School and LaSalle High School.

Coach John J. "Bobby" Cavanaugh said the game has been rescheduled for Monday, May 12.

Ann Curtis Ties World's Record

Ann Curtis

Miss Curtis, swimming the 100-yards in 59.4 seconds, equalled the official world's record held by F. Nathansen of Denmark.

Miss Zimmerman's time of 2:31.2 in the first preliminary heat stood as a new American and AAU meet standard because the 200-yard backstroke is new this year in indoor competition.

The qualifiers for tonight's finals in the backstroke in addition to the Misses Mellon, Zimmerman, Olson and Jensen were Donna Maddock, San Francisco, and Norah Kirkpatrick, Vancouver, B. C.

Ridgeley Church Fetes Champions

Calvary Methodist Floormen Honored

Calvary Methodist Church honored its YMCA Sunday School Basketball League champions with a dinner last night at the church in Ridgeley.

Ralph Hoelzer, manager of the team, served as toastmaster, and the invocation was given by the Rev. R L. Greyonds, pastor. A ham dinner was served the 34 guests.

Clifton Van Roby, physical director of the "Y", referred to Calvary Methodist as "one of the finest in the history of the league," adding that the church should be proud of having a team win the trophy after playing only three years. The speaker said that a 10-point win was considered a close game in he eyes of the Calvary five. In conclusion he said that Hoelzer's interest in the team was a great help to the team's fine play as was the able coaching of James Lindsay.

Hoezler then presented jackets to the five boys. Inscribed on the back of the jackets were the words "Calvary Methodist 1947 Champions." Each boy's first name was lettered on the front.

Jesse Riggleman, Ridgeley High coach, expressed the hope that the four boys he will get from Calvary would defeat Allegany High and Ronald Hoelzer, the Calvary first stringer, who goes to the Camper squad, when those boys are playing first team ball.

Riggleman said he was glad to see Ridgeley get some recognition and thought that now Cumberland would "give Ridgeley citizenship papers and not consider them foreigners." He stressed that Ridgeley will profit from Sunday School League competition as the boys will now lose their fear of "teams scross the river."

John Borchert, Potomac State School student, said that the Calvary records of 17 consecutive league wins probably will never be equalled. He stated that competition in the league was keen the past season but the power of Calvary led observers to believe the league had weakened.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May 2—Thank goodness Hollywood is waking up to the gravest, most serious menace it has ever had. I speak, of course, of the wave of Communism sweeping our beloved country. At least three pictures are being made showing the danger of the Red peril, and writers with known Communistic tendencies are being weeded out in an effort to help stem this growing threat to our national safety.

Greer Garson

Steve Fisher is the latest to throw his hat in the anti-Communistic ring. He has taken time off to write a screenplay based on Arthur Koestler's novel, "Darkness At Noon."

Fisher has made arrangements with Koestler, who is now in Ireland, to sell the screenplay after it is finished. He has already talked to Robert Montgomery, who has expressed interest in playing the lead. Steve, remember, did the screenplay on "Lady In the Lake," the highly successful movie Bob directed.

Greta Garbo's one time movie success, "Fainted Veil," has been taken off the shelf and handed over to the experts to see if it can be revamped for Greer Garson, M-G-M's Garbo of today.

If these experts decide it's worth while, Somerset Maugham will be asked to rewrite the latter half and Leon Gondon will be assigned to produce it. I know that Louis B. Mayer is always adverse to remaking pictures unless the story can be improved and brought up to date.

Very often these old pictures are dated and then again some of them are better than are our modern yarns.

You won't see Frederick March and Florence Eldridge in the movie version of their play "Years Ago"—that is, not unless they both have a change of mind.

I talked with them backstage and they both feel when the movie is made the father and mother roles will become secondary and the romantic angle of the boy and girl played up.

Of course, Freddie, after his Academy Award and the smash hit in Ruth Gordon's play, can pick and choose.

He has a photograph in his dressing room of Ruth Gordon's dad, the character he plays in "Years Ago." You see it's her life story. Freddie is the spitting image of her dad.

Miss "Pat" Henry, the Hollywood saleswoman to whom Evalyn Walsh McLean once gave a valuable piece of jewelry, telephoned to tell me more about that fabulous woman's generosity. She has been remembered in her will—but what touches Pat even more is that her friend willed her little dog to her.

"I have only a small place to live and two dogs of my own—but if I have to take a larger place I'm going to give that little dog the best home in the world. It's just a small way to repay the friendship of one of the finest women I have ever known."

And, while Cary Grant and Singe Hasso didn't arrive together, they found one another most attractive company.

Kay and Adolph's party was one of the most beautiful of the season with every lamp in the house removed so that nothing could spoil the effect of the flickering candles and the Viennese music.

Among the girls who looked dreamy in the flickering light were Noreen Nash Siegel, the guest of honor; Ann Rutherford, Evie Wynn Johnson, Andrea Howard, Marg Hall and the beautiful sister of Eva and Zsa-Zsa Gabor.

Brenda Forbes, now in "Three To Make Ready" on Broadway is getting ready to marry Merrill Shepard, Chicago attorney, May 11.

Regarding my item of a rumor that Mrs. Herb Yates had sold some of her Republic stock, the following wire from Papa Yates speaks for itself: "No one in my family is selling any stock to the Goetz or Brulatour estate interests. Warmest personal regards."

Stuart Barthelmess who has been pining away for Sonja Henie, made a surprise appearance at the Beverly Tropics with Ruth Brady.

Too bad that Estelle Taylor's show closed in St. Louis—but she isn't too unhappy. MaClane has offered her a part in his new show, "Black John."

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, May 2—Thank goodness Hollywood is waking up to the gravest, most serious menace Amerika has ever had. I speak, of course, of the wave of Communism sweeping our beloved country. At least three pictures are being made showing the danger of the Red peril, and writers with known Communistic tendencies are being weeded out in an effort to help stem this growing threat to our national safety.

Greer Garson

Steve Fisher is the latest to throw his hat in the anti-Communistic ring. He has taken time off to write a screenplay based on Arthur Koestler's novel, "Darkness At Noon."

Fisher has made arrangements with Koestler, who is now in Ireland, to sell the screenplay after it is finished. He has already talked to Robert Montgomery, who has expressed interest in playing the lead. Steve, remember, did the screenplay on "Lady In the Lake," the highly successful movie Bob directed.

Greta Garbo's one time movie success, "Painted Veil," has been taken off the shelf and handed over to the experts to see if it can be revamped for Greer Garson, M-G-M's Garbo of today.

If these experts decide it's worth while, Somerset Maugham will be asked to rewrite the latter half and Leon Gondon will be assigned to produce it. I know that Louis B. Mayer is always adverse to remaking pictures unless the story can be improved and brought up to date.

Very often these old pictures are dated and then again some of them are better than are our modern yarns.

You won't see Frederick March and Florence Eldridge in the movie version of their play "Years Ago"—that is, not unless they both have a change of mind.

I talked with them backstage and they both feel when the movie is made the father and mother roles will become secondary and the romantic angle of the boy and girl played up.

Of course, Freddie, after his Academy Award and the smash hit in Ruth Gordon's play, can pick and choose.

He has a photograph in his dressing room of Ruth Gordon's dad, the character he plays in "Years Ago." You see it's her life story. Freddie is the spitting image of her dad.

Miss "Pat" Henry, the Hollywood saleswoman to whom Evalyn Walsh McLean once gave a valuable piece of jewelry, telephoned to tell me more about that fabulous woman's generosity. She has been remembered in her will—but what touches Pat even more is that her friend willed her little dog to her.

"I have only a small place to live and two dogs of my own—but if I have to take a larger place I'm going to give that little dog the best home in the world. It's just a small way to repay the friendship of one of the finest women I have ever known."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Joan Crawford and Greg Bautzer (yes, back together again and looking very happy about the whole thing) were the headlights at the beautiful candlelit dinner-dance tossed by Adolph Spreckles.

And, while Cary Grant and Singe Hasso didn't arrive together, they found one another most attractive company.

Kay and Adolph's party was one of the most beautiful of the season with every lamp in the house removed so that nothing could spoil the effect of the flickering candles and the Viennese music.

Among the girls who looked dreamy in the flickering light were Noreen Nash Siegel, the guest of honor; Ann Rutherford, Evie Wynn Johnson, Andrea Howard, Marg Hall and the beautiful sister of Eva and Zsa-Zsa Gabor.

Brenda Forbes, now in "Three To Make Ready" on Broadway is getting ready to marry Merrill Shepard, Chicago attorney, May 11.

Regarding my item of a rumor that Mrs. Herb Yates had sold some of her Republic stock, the following wire from Papa Yates speaks for itself: "No one in my family is selling any stock to the Goetz or Brulatour estate interests. Warmest personal regards."

Stuart Barthelmess who has been pining away for Sonja Henie, made a surprise appearance at the Beverly Tropics with Ruth Brady.

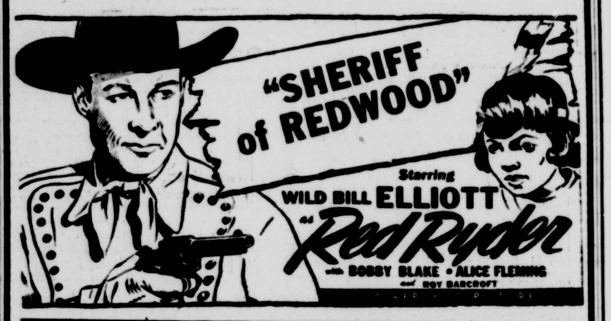

Too bad that Estelle Taylor's show closed in St. Louis—but she isn't too unhappy. MaClane has offered her a part in his new show, "Black John."

Liquor Law Test Plan Denied By E. A. Cromwell

Says No Action Has Been Planned

Eldred A. Cromwell, owner of The Elda Inn, Braddock Road, who launched the court battle which resulted in declaring the 1933 liquor law unconstitutional, said last night he has not made nor authorized any statements for publication that he plans to wage or lead a court fight on the present liquor law.

Cromwell declared, "before I take any legal action on liquor laws or anything else, I consult a competent attorney, get his advice and proceed with whatever action is necessary. I have not consulted my attorney and have planned no campaign. I like to know where I'm going before I start. I'd like to know where the paper got the stuff they printed."

Attorney Denies Account

Edward J. Ryan, local attorney who represented Cromwell in his successful challenge of the 1933 Liquor Act told the News he had not made any statements on the subject for publication, and that his client, Cromwell, had not consulted with him about the matter. Ryan declared he had not discussed the question of filing litigation on the present liquor law for publication with anyone, and had not been asked by any citizen to file such action. He declared, "I don't know who gave that story to the paper, and Cromwell called me this afternoon and asked if I did. He didn't authorize it and neither did I."

Cromwell said he had applied for a Class B liquor license and it was not granted although his original beer and wine license was renewed. The Liquor Board was quoted as saying that in Cromwell's case, they opposed liquor licenses to road houses—where there is no police protection.

Praises State Police

Replying to this statement, Cromwell declared, "I don't think that speaks very highly of our state police. My place is within three to five minutes drive from the State Police barracks. Across the fields to LaVale sub-station, it is less than 3,000 feet from my back door. I have been here 13 years and have never had occasion to call police, but have been assured by officers at LaVale barracks that they will come immediately if I need them. Besides, they constantly and regularly patrol this road and are always on the job."

Frank Orbello, 113 North Mechanic Street was also mentioned as one of those who might contest the law. Larry Orbello, his brother and partner denied that Frank had made any such statement to the press and said he had gone to talk with Crromwell about it. Cromwell said Frank had called him and that was the first he knew about the published story.

Orbello also applied for a Class B liquor license which was not issued by the board.

Many Ponder Law

A number of persons have been turned down for licenses, many because there were so many more applications than there were licenses to issue, board members say. Walter C. Capper, chairman of the Liquor Board, asked about Cromwell's application said, "I have no statement to make about it." Fred Crowe, secretary to the board, in the presence of Henry J. Sweene, the other board member, explained that the board attempted to place this class of licenses in incorporated or more heavily populated communities, and to eliminate road houses as far as possible.

Some members of the board express the view that the new liquor law might be upset if challenged legally, but explained, "it is the law we have to work with and we shall do the best we can."

Several attorneys here have expressed the view that some sections of the law "will not hold up in court if tested."

Many people believe the law may eventunally be tested, but those people mentioned as planning to do so, all said last night that "no action has been taken or planned."

Payne To Assist In Contract Talks At Celanese Plant

Herbert W. Payne, New York, director of the TWUA's rayon division, will head the delegation from Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, when the 8,600 member local resumes contract negotiations with the Celanese Corporation of America next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The contract talks adjourned yesterday after three days of discussions during which the union presented its contract proposals and the company presented its list of proposals for changes in the agreement.

William Boyd Coleman, union president, said much of the time so far has been spent in clarification of the demands of the company and union.

Mr. Payne is well known here and has assisted in wage and contract negotiations on several occasions. He will be in Cumberland in time to assist in an arbitration case scheduled Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the court house and will remain here for the contract talks.

Sidney Wolff, New York, will be the arbitrator in the case. Union officials said the Celanese wants supervisory and staff workers demoted to production jobs with full seniority rights. The union contends that this is contrary to the contract.

Police Hold Koelker

A man identified as Joseph Koelker, this city, who has been arrested seven times since March 1, on charges of being drunk, was being held in City Jail last night for questioning in the office of the state's attorney this morning. He was arrested by Lt. Detective B. Frank Gaffney and Detective Edwin R. Lilya.

Housing Office Lease To End May 31

Mayor Thomas S. Post said yesterday he has been officially notified that the federal government's lease on second floor office space in City Hall, at present occupied by Charles C. Yost, Sr., locality housing expediter, will be terminated at midnight of May 31.

J. F. Johnson, chief of the procurement section, Office of the Housing Expediter, said that the lease, which took effect last July 1, was originally scheduled to run until June 30 of this year. No reason was given for the earlier termination.

Yost could not be reached last night for comment.

Woman Strangles Herself In Bed Near Spring Gap

Verdict Of Suicide Is Issued In Death

A despondent 63-year-old woman was found dead in her bed at the home of her son near Spring Gap yesterday afternoon after, authorities said, she strangled herself by wrapping a length of cloth around her neck and tying it to the top rail of her bed yesterday morning.

The dead woman was identified by Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, as Mrs. Cora Amelia Catlett, of Colliers Run, near Spring Gap.

Dr. Deming issued a verdict of suicide by strangulation and set the time of death at about 8 a. m.

Authorities said they received a call yesterday about 2:30 p. m. from Mrs. Cecil R. Catlett informing them that her mother-in-law had committed suicide. Mrs. Catlett said she had discovered the body after her husband left for work at the B. and O. Bolt and Forge shop at 2 p. m.

Used Strip of Muslin

Mrs. Catlett told Dr. Deming that she went upstairs to her mother-in-law's room and found her dead. Authorities said the woman had strangled herself by taking a short piece of two inch wide muslin, winding it around her neck several times and then tying it to the top rail of an iron bed so that the weight of the body caused strangulation.

Mrs. Catlett had not been seen since Thursday night by any member of the family since she usually did not arise until her son left for work, authorities said.

Mrs. Catlett had been living with her son, Cecil, since last May. The family told Dr. Deming she had had several operations in past years and was of a nervous disposition. She became despondent about a year ago and had threatened to take her life on several occasions, authorities were told.

Service Is Planned

Assisting Dr. Deming in the investigation was Cpl. C. A. Disney of the Maryland State Police.

Mrs. Catlett was a native of Williamsport, a daughter of Mrs. Martha Dodd Wolz, 88, who makes her home with Mrs. Catlett's half-brother, William Goldsborough, Valley Road, and the late James Wolz. Two grandchildren, Martha and Joan Carroll Catlett also survive.

The body is at the Stein Funeral Home where a funeral service will be conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

Labor Groups Will Discuss Problems

The Western Maryland Labor Conference will hold a meeting tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in Textile Hall, North Mechanic Street, to discuss some of the chief problems facing labor today, William Boyd Coleman, vice president, announced yesterday.

Among topics to be discussed are anti-labor legislation now before Congress, the cost of living, veterans problems, housing and the profits of industry, he said.

John Edelman, Washington, TWUA legislative representative, will speak and later lead open discussion on the legislative program of labor.

Coleman said a representative of a consumer's protection group will be present to discuss the cost of living picture. Labor, he said, is sharing in the blame for high prices when actually the cost of labor is only about 35 per cent of the cost of industrial products.

FATHER VEIGH WILL SPEAK HERE SUNDAY

Rev. Father Adrian J. M. Veigh, TOR, president of St. Francis College, Loretto, Pa., will be principal speaker at the breakfast of Cumberland Council No. 586, Knights of Columbus, which will hold its annual communion services Sunday at 8:30 a. m. in St. Mary's Catholic Church, Oldtown Road, Edward A. Cosgrove, grand knight of the council announced yesterday. The breakfast will be held in the basement of the church.

A native of Lilly, Pa., Rev. Father Veigh was graduated from St. Francis College in 1934 with a Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry. He entered the seminary the same year and the same year was ordained to the priesthood in May, 1937. His theological studies were completed in 1938.

A parade and military service in Rose Hill Cemetery, sponsored by Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, scheduled to begin at 10 a. m. May 30 will be held to commemorate the city's war dead, Thomas F. Conlon, chairman of the Memorial Day program announced.

Liquor Board Issues A Total Of 321 Licenses For $80,880

Warning Issued To All Operators

A total of 321 alcoholic beverage licenses of all classes have been issued by the Allegany County Liquor Control Board at a total revenue of $80,880, according to Fred Crowe, secretary of the Board, after a recap was completed yesterday.

This number includes 11 tavern licenses at $1,000 each; eight retail package goods stores at $500 each; and 48 on and off sale beer, wine and liquor licenses at $600. This group constitutes the 67 restricted licenses under the new law. Under the old statute, 58 licenses were permitted, but nine new ones were authorized under present law.

A total of 58 club licenses at $300 each for beer, wine and liquor have also been issued. This number is limited by law to 60, Crowe explained, and 59 had been issued under the old 1933 law. Two of these, the Goodwill Volunteer Fire Company at Lonaconing, and the Alhambra Club at Mt. Savage, surrendered their licenses, and the Board approved the remaining 57 clubs, which have been licensed previously. One new club license was issued and that went to the South End Democratic Club, 332 Virginia Avenue.

Will Reduce Clubs

Members of the board explained yesterday that the board is not encouraging any new applications for the two remaining club licenses, and it is the desire of the board to gradually have the issued number reduced. Legislators explain it had been the intention to include a section in the new law, to gradually reduce the number of club licenses in the county to around 35 or 40, but it was overlooked.

Board members have been very frank in their statements about club licenses. Any clubs which violate gambling or other laws, will have their licenses revoked, they said. As licenses are revoked or otherwise surrendered the Board plans to withhold them until the number of clubs is reduced to a reasonable figure, they declared.

Members of legitimate clubs, which normally conduct themselves properly, regard this as a move to eliminate the "one man clubs" attacked by Circuit Court Judges, and believe the Liquor Boards attitude on the club question, will do much to curb gambling and other vices of which some clubs have been accused.

115 New Applicants

In making his recapitulation yesterday, Secretary Crowe declared that there were 115 applicants for

County Conveys Title Of Canal Bridge To City

An order was passed by the Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday to convey the county's interest in the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal bridge on Ford Avenue, to the City of Cumberland.

The action was taken at the request of Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, who explained that the city wishes to remove the bridge, lower the grade, fill that portion of the canal bridge after placing conduits. The bridge was built in 1911 by the county and has in recent years, been termed unsafe, obsolete and a traffic hazard.

A petition was filed from 32 residents, asking the Board to install a cafeteria at Columbia Street Public School. It was explained that there are 250 children at the school required to eat a cold lunch while other schools have cafeterias. The condition is termed "unfair" by the petitioners. The Board of Education recently recommended the cafeteria for the school.

The commissioners were advised by J. Milton Patterson, director of the State Department of Public Welfare, that the Legislature has provided $25,000 per year for the next two years in state funds for care of inmates at Sylvan Retreat, beginning July 1. This is an increase of $17,000 a year over previous state grants.

$6,000 Damage Suits Settled By Attorneys

Attorneys reported yesterday an out-of-court settlement has been reached in two damage suits against Alfred J. Keinhofer, trading as Fort Cumberland Service Station, 122 South Johnson Street.

The suits were filed by Helen F. Hanion for $5,000 damages, for injuries she allegedly suffered in a fall on the pavement in front of the service station, and by her husband James Hanion who sought $1,000 for expenses incurred.

Mrs. Hanion, through her attorney William R. Carscaden, claimed Keinhofer allowed water to accumulate on the pavement, and that it froze and she broke her leg in a fall on the ice. Keinhofer was represented by Thomas B. Finan and William C. Walsh.

A suit for divorce was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Eloise M. Hunter, vs. James Stanley Hunter, Jr.

Apple Blossoms To Bloom Over Weekend

Apple trees in the Hancock and Town Hill sections are expected to be in full bloom over the weekend, it was reported yesterday by orchardists there who expect numerous "sight-seeing" visitors from Cumberland and the tri-state area tomorrow and Monday.

Samuel Dillon, former owner of Town Creek Hotel and one of the leading fruit growers of that section, said two cold spells earlier this week caused slight damage to the trees. However, he said, the apple crop has been retarded enough to escape serious damage.

Apples will be thinned out slightly as a result of the unseasonal weather, he stated, adding that the pink clusters expected to blossom tomorrow throughout his orchard were not injured by the frost.

Veterans' Cases Are Increasing, Red Cross Says

Various Services Listed In Report

Well over twice as many veterans' cases were handled by Allegany County Chapter, American Red Cross, in the first four months of this year as were handled in the same period last year, according to Mrs. Louise Dean, home service secretary.

In a comparative report released yesterday, Mrs. Dean noted that from January through April of this year, 600 cases involving veterans were handled, as compared to 250 during that period in 1946.

Service Losses Decrease

Cases involving Army and Navy personnel decreased in number, with only 310 Army cases handled in the and 117 Navy cases this year as against 704 during that time in 1946; and 117 Navy vases this year as compared to 217 last year in the four-month period.

Of the 2,780 cases acted upon in 1946, 1,443 were for Army personnel, 471 for Navy personnel, 852 were for veterans and 14 involved civilians.

Red Cross activites in connection with Army and Navy personnel included furlough extensions, reports on health of family, assistance with government benefits, financial assistance, consultation and guidance, various types of emergency aid and detailed social studies.

For ex-servicemen, the Red Cross provided assistance in filing disability death and insurance claims, hospital and domiciliary care, vocational rehabilitation, reports for the Veterans Administration and financial assistance.

Notorize Applications

Mrs. Dean pointed out that the local Red Cross office has completed and notarized 1,162 terminal leave applications since last August, urging all veterans who have not yet filed their applications to do so immedaitely. They are requested to bring their original discharge as well as the photostatic copy to the office when filing their applications.

In a general discussion of postwar home service work of Allegany County Chapter, Mrs. Dean said the Red Cross in many cases is financially maintaining families of veterans who have filed claims for disability and whose compensation is pending. She added that once a veteran has been denied compensation by the Veterans Administration, he is not eligible for this type of Red Cross assistance, however.

Mrs. Dean reported that the 38 persons in 11 families made homeless in the Reinhart Building fire last month were assisted by the Red Cross in obtaining clothing, household goods and temporary shelter. Rehabilitation work has been completed for these persons.

She said the Red Cross gratefully acknowldge the splendid co-operation of the Salvation Army and of various local merchants in assisting the fire victims.

Plans Are Made To Entertain Louis Bromfield

Noted Author To Speak Here May 27

Four committees were appointed yesterday to welcome and entertain Louis Bromfield, noted author and agriculture authority, on May 27 when he is scheduled to speak at a public meeting in Allegany High School at 8 p. m., according to Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Henry W. Price, president of the Chamber of Commerce, was named chairman of the committee to receive Bromfield, who is expected to arrive early in the day and make a tour of Garrett County before he delivers his address in the city. Aiding Price on the committee will be C. P. Jolley, John D. Liebau and Harry J. Barton.

Will Inspect Farms

William M. Nace will head the committee to arrange for the Garrett County tour, on which Bromfield is expected to inspect farming conditions and soil conservation practices in the area. William A. Parr and Ralph McHenry, county agent, will work on the committee with Nace.

Arrangements for transportation of Bromfield and other guests of the Chamber of Commerce on the tour and to the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, where dinner will be served at 6 p. m. will be handled by G. L. Johnson, chairman, George Schwarzenbach, James W. Beacham and R. E. Light. Guests at the dinner will include members of the Committee on Agriculture and directors of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

The dinner committee will be headed by C. P. Jolley who will be assisted by George M. Martin and Robert O. Neill. The dinner will be held as an entertainment feature for Bromfield with the guests scheduled to leave from the club for Allegany High School, Smith explained.

While the list of invitations to be mailed to special guests is not yet complete, Smith said Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; Edward Davis, chief of the State Soil Conservation program; Russell Lord, editor of "The Land" a monthly publication; and O. E. Fink, executive director of the Friends of the Land organization, which was founded by Bromfield, have already indicated that they will attend.

To Invite Governor

Governor William Preston Lane and Mayor Thomas S. Post will also receive invitations, committee members declared.

Arrangements for the affair, which is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture and Membership Activities Committee were completed yesterday in the Chamber office.

The evening address in Allegany High will be open to the public and no charge will be made, committee members explained. Bromfield will speak on agriculture and soil conservation, a subject that he has become greatly interested in since acquiring a farm near the place of his birth in Ohio.

Smith said several out-of-state groups are planning to attend and added that 76 persons from Keyser, W. Va., have already indicated that they will be here for the evening address.

Expediter Will Aid Housing Projects

Warning against housing developments in areas unsuited for residential use, Charles C. Yost, Sr., locality housing expediter for Western Maryland, announced yesterday that his office in City Hall is prepared to give guidance to area communities in land planning and development.

Services of specialists from the New York regional office of the Office of the Housing Expediter may be secured on prior notice, he explained.

"There is always the danger that during these periods of rapid development, housing will spring up in areas never meant for residential use," Yost said. "My office is making a special effort to call attention to this before money has been invested, construction started and the foundation laid for future slums."

He pointed out that state enabling laws give communities the power to govern the trend and type of growth by creating and enforcing zoning ordinances.

The expediter listed important factors for community planning in land development as follows:

Helping builders locate good land, well situated and cheap enough for the low and moderately-priced housing which apparently will be in demand for years to come, while avoiding such undesirable features as noise, smoke and traffic.

Freeing suitable land from legal and financial obstacles such as delinquent taxes or special assessments, obscure titles, scattered ownerships, adverse zoning and inadequate facilities.

Expediting the planning, construction and financing of utilities, and providing additional community services for outlying new developments.

Emery Newell, 320 Waverly Terrace, Joseph Moore, 56 Bedford Street and Harry Reger, Gay Street, all arrested on Baltimore Street at 6:20 p. m. are charged with being drunk and loitering.

Lloyd Niciley, this city, charged with being drunk was arrested in the business district early last evening, along with P. E. Driscoll, Pittsburgh, Pa.

George Crites, Oldtown, Md., was taken into custody at 8:30 p. m. and Maurice Coleman, 215 South Lee Street was arrested at 9:20. All were charged with being drunk.

Police said the men will be given hearings this morning in Police Court.

Liquor Law Test Plan Denied By E. A. Cromwell

Says No Action Has Been Planned

Eldred A. Cromwell, owner of The Elda Inn, Braddock Road, who launched the court battle which resulted in declaring the 1933 liquor law unconstitutional, said last night he has not made nor authorized any statements for publication that he plans to wage or lead a court fight on the present liquor law.

Cromwell declared, "before I take any legal action on liquor laws or anything else, I consult a competent attorney, get his advice and proceed with whatever action is necessary. I have not consulted my attorney and have planned no campaign. I like to know where I'm going before I start. I'd like to know where the paper got the stuff they printed."

Attorney Denies Account

Edward J. Ryan, local attorney who represented Cromwell in his successful challenge of the 1933 Liquor Act told the News he had not made any statements on the subject for publication, and that his client, Cromwell, had not consulted with him about the matter. Ryan declared he had not discussed the question of filing litigation on the present liquor law for publication with anyone, and had not been asked by any citizen to file such action. He declared, "I don't know who gave that story to the paper, and Cromwell called me this afternoon and asked if I did. He didn't authorize it and neither did I."

Cromwell said he had applied for a Class B liquor license and it was not granted although his original beer and wine license was renewed. The Liquor Board was quoted as saying that in Cromwell's case, they opposed liquor licenses to road houses—where there is no police protection.

Praises State Police

Replying to this statement, Cromwell declared, "I don't think that speaks very highly of our state police. My place is within three to five minutes drive from the State Police barracks. Across the fields to LaVale sub-station, it is less than 3,000 feet from my back door. I have been here 13 years and have never had occasion to call police, but have been assured by officers at LaVale barracks that they will come immediately if I need them. Besides, they constantly and regularly patrol this road and are always on the job."

Frank Orbello, 113 North Mechanic Street was also mentioned as one of those who might contest the law. Larry Orbello, his brother and partner denied that Frank had made any such statement to the press and said he had gone to talk with Crromwell about it. Cromwell said Frank had called him and that was the first he knew about the published story.

Orbello also applied for a Class B liquor license which was not issued by the board.

Many Ponder Law

A number of persons have been turned down for licenses, many because there were so many more applications than there were licenses to issue, board members say. Walter C. Capper, chairman of the Liquor Board, asked about Cromwell's application said, "I have no statement to make about it." Fred Crowe, secretary to the board, in the presence of Henry J. Sweene, the other board member, explained that the board attempted to place this class of licenses in incorporated or more heavily populated communities, and to eliminate road houses as far as possible.

Some members of the board express the view that the new liquor law might be upset if challenged legally, but explained, "it is the law we have to work with and we shall do the best we can."

Several attorneys here have expressed the view that some sections of the law "will not hold up in court if tested."

Many people believe the law may eventually be tested, but those people mentioned as planning to do so, all said last night that "no action has been taken or planned."

Payne To Assist In Contract Talks At Celanese Plant

Herbert W. Payne, New York, director of the TWUA's rayon division, will head the delegation from Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, when the 8,600 member local resumes contract negotiations with the Celanese Corporation of America next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The contract talks adjourned yesterday after three days of discussions during which the union presented its contract proposals and the company presented its list of proposals for changes in the agreement.

William Boyd Coleman, union president, said much of the time so far has been spent in clarification of the demands of the company and union.

Mr. Payne is well known here and has assisted in wage and contract negotiations on several occasions. He will be in Cumberland in time to assist in an arbitration case scheduled Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the court house and will remain here for the contract talks.

Sidney Wolff, New York, will be the arbitrator in the case. Union officials said the Celanese wants supervisory and staff workers denied to production jobs with full seniority rights. The union contends that this is contrary to the contract.

Police Hold Koelker

A man identified as Joseph Koelker, this city, who has been arrested seven times since March 1, on charges of being drunk, was being held in City Jail last night for questioning in the office of the state's attorney this morning. Housing Office Lease To End May 31

Mayor Thomas S. Post said yesterday he has been officially notified that the federal government's lease on second floor office space in City Hall, at present occupied by Charles C. Yost, Sr., locality housing expediter, will be terminated at midnight of May 31.

J. F. Johnson, chief of the procurement section, Office of the Housing Expediter, said that the lease, which took effect last July 1, was originally scheduled to run until June 30 of this year. No reason was given for the earlier termination.

Yost could not be reached last night for comment.

Woman Strangles Herself In Bed Near Spring Gap

Verdict Of Suicide Is Issued In Death

A despondent 63-year-old woman was found dead in her bed at the home of her son near Spring Gap yesterday afternoon after, authorities said, she strangled herself by wrapping a length of cloth around her neck and tying it to the top rail of her bed yesterday morning.

The dead woman was identified by Dr. H. V. Deming, deputy county medical examiner, as Mrs. Cora Amelia Catlett, of Colliers Run, near Spring Gap.

Dr. Deming issued a verdict of suicide by strangulation and set the time of death at about 8 a. m.

Authorities said they received a call yesterday about 2:30 p. m. from Mrs. Cecil R. Catlett informing them that her mother-in-law had committed suicide. Mrs. Catlett said she had discovered the body after her husband left for work at the B. and O. Bolt and Forge shop at 2 p. m.

Used Strip of Muslin

Mrs. Catlett told Dr. Deming that she went upstairs to her mother-in-law's room and found her dead. Authorities said the woman had strangled herself by taking a short piece of two inch wide muslin, winding it around her neck several times and then tying it to the top rail of an iron bed so that the weight of the body caused strangulation.

Mrs. Catlett had not been seen since Thursday night by any member of the family since she usually did not arise until her son left for work, authorities said.

Mrs. Catlett had been living with her son, Cecil, since last May. The family told Dr. Deming she had had several operations in past years and was of a nervous disposition. She became despondent about a year ago and had threatened to take her life on several occasions, authorities were told.

Service Is Planned

Assisting Dr. Deming in the investigation was Cpl. C. A. Disney of the Maryland State Police.

Mrs. Catlett was a native of Williamsport, a daughter of Mrs. Martha Dodd Wolz, 88, who makes her home with Mrs. Catlett's half-brother, William Goldsborough, Valley Road, and the late James Wolz. Two grandchildren, Martha and Joan Carroll Catlett also survive.

The body is at the Stein Funeral Home where a funeral service will be conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

Labor Groups Will Discuss Problems

The Western Maryland Labor Conference will hold a meeting tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in Textile Hall, North Mechanic Street, to discuss some of the chief problems facing labor today, William Boyd Coleman, vice president, announced yesterday.

Among topics to be discussed are anti-labor legislation now before Congress, the cost of living, veterans problems, housing and the profits of industry, he said.

John Edelman, Washington, TWUA legislative representative, will speak and later lead open discussion on the legislative program of labor.

Coleman said a representative of a consumer's protection group will be present to discuss the cost of living picture. Labor, he said, is sharing in the blame for high prices when actually the cost of labor is only about 35 per cent of the cost of industrial products.

Liquor Board Issues A Total Of 321 Licenses For $80,880

Warning Issued To All Operators

A total of 321 alcoholic beverage licenses of all classes have been issued by the Allegany County Liquor Control Board at a total revenue of $80,880, according to Fred Crowe, secretary of the Board, after a recap was completed yesterday.

This number includes 11 tavern licenses at $1,000 each; eight retail package goods stores at $500 each; and 48 on and off sale beer, wine and liquor licenses at $600. This group constitutes the 67 restricted licenses under the new law. Under the old statute, 58 licenses were permitted, but nine new ones were authorized under present law.

A total of 58 club licenses at $300 each for beer, wine and liquor have also been issued. This number is limited by law to 60, Crowe explained, and 59 had been issued under the old 1933 law. Two of these, the Goodwill Volunteer Fire Company at Lonaconing, and the Alhambra Club at Mt. Savage, surrendered their licenses, and the Board approved the remaining 57 clubs, which have been licensed previously. One new club license was issued and that went to the South End Democratic Club, 332 Virginia Avenue.

Will Reduce Clubs

Members of the board explained yesterday that the board is not encouraging any new applications for the two remaining club licenses, and it is the desire of the board to gradually have the issued number reduced. Legislators explain it had been the intention to include a section in the new law, to gradually reduce the number of club licenses in the county to around 35 or 40, but it was overlooked.

Board members have been very frank in their statements about club licenses. Any clubs which violate gambling or other laws, will have their licenses revoked, they said. As licenses are revoked or otherwise surrendered the Board plans to withhold them until the number of clubs is reduced to a reasonable figure, they declared.

Members of legitimate clubs, which normally conduct themselves properly, regard this as a move to eliminate the "one man clubs" attacked by Circuit Court Judges, and believe the Liquor Boards attitude on the club question, will do much to curb gambling and other vices of which some clubs have been accused.

115 New Applicants

County Conveys Title Of Canal Bridge To City

An order was passed by the Allegany County Board of Commissioners yesterday to convey the county's interest in the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal bridge on Ford Avenue, to the City of Cumberland.

The action was taken at the request of Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, who explained that the city wishes to remove the bridge, lower the grade, fill that portion of the canal bridge after placing conduits. The bridge was built in 1911 by the county and has in recent years been termed unsafe, obsolete and a traffic hazard.

A petition was filed from 32 residents, asking the Board to install a cafeteria at Columbia Street Public School. It was explained that there are 250 children at the school required to eat a cold lunch while other schools have cafeterias. The condition is termed "unfair" by the petitioners. The Board of Education recently recommended the cafeteria for the school.

The commissioners were advised by J. Milton Patterson, director of the State Department of Public Welfare, that the Legislature has provided $25,000 per year for the next two years in state funds for care of inmates at Sylvan Retreat, beginning July 1. This is an increase of $17,000 a year over previous state grants.

$6,000 Damage Suits Settled By Attorneys

Attorneys reported yesterday an out-of-court settlement has been reached in two damage suits against Alfred J. Keinhofer, trading as Fort Cumberland Service Station, 122 South Johnson Street.

The suits were filed by Helen F. Hanion for $5,000 damages, for injuries she allegedly suffered in a fall on the pavement in front of the service station, and by her husband James Hanion who sought $1,000 for expenses incurred.

Mrs. Hanion, through her attorney William R. Carscaden, claimed Keinhofer allowed water to accumulate on the pavement, and that it froze and she broke her leg in a fall on the ice. Keinhofer was represented by Thomas B. Finan and William C. Walsh.

A suit for divorce was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Eloise M Hunter, vs. James Stanley Hunter, Jr.

Apple Blossoms To Bloom Over Weekend

Apple trees in the Hancock and Town Hill sections are expected to be in full bloom over the weekend, it was reported yesterday by orchardists there who expect numerous "sight-seeing" visitors from Cumberland and the tri-state area tomorrow and Monday.

Samuel Dillon, former owner of Town Creek Hotel and one of the leading fruit growers of that section, said two cold spells earlier this week caused slight damage to the trees. However, he said, the apple crop has been retarded enough to escape serious damage.

Apples will be thinned out slightly as a result of the unseasonal weather, he stated, adding that the pink clusters expected to blossom tomorrow throughout his orchard were not injured by the frost.

Veterans' Cases Are Increasing, Red Cross Says

Various Services Listed In Report

Well over twice as many veterans' cases were handled by Allegany County Chapter, American Red Cross, in the first four months of this year as were handled in the same period last year, according to Mrs. Louise Dean, home service secretary.

In a comparative report released yesterday, Mrs. Dean noted that from January through April of this year, 600 cases involving veterans were handled, as compared to 250 during that period in 1946.

Service Losses Decrease

Cases involving Army and Navy personnel decreased in number, with only 310 Army cases handled in the and 117 Navy cases this year as against 704 during that time in 1946; and 117 Navy vases this year as compared to 217 last year in the four-month period.

Of the 2,780 cases acted upon in 1946, 1,443 were for Army personnel, 471 for Navy personnel, 852 were for veterans and 14 involved civilians.

Red Cross activites in connection with Army and Navy personnel included furlough extensions, reports on health of family, assistance with government benefits, financial assistance, consultation and guidance, various types of emergency aid and detailed social studies.

For ex-servicemen, the Red Cross provided assistance in filing disability death and insurance claims, hospital and domiciliary care, vocational rehabilitation, reports for the Veterans Administration and financial assistance.

Notorize Applications

Mrs. Dean pointed out that the local Red Cross office has completed and notarized 1,162 terminal leave applications since last August, urging all veterans who have not yet filed their applications to do so immediately. They are requested to bring their original discharge as well as the photostatic copy to the office when filing their applications.

In a general discussion of postwar home service work of Allegany County Chapter, Mrs. Dean said the Red Cross in many cases is financially maintaining families of veterans who have filed claims for disability and whose compensation is pending. She added that once a veteran has been denied compensation by the Veterans Administration, he is not eligible for this type of Red Cross assistance, however.

Mrs. Dean reported that the 38 persons in 11 families made homeless in the Reinhart Building fire last month were assisted by the Red Cross in obtaining clothing, household goods and temporary shelter. Rehabilitation work has been completed for these persons.

She said the Red Cross gratefully acknowldge the splendid co-operation of the Salvation Army and of various local merchants in assisting the fire victims.

Noted Author To Speak Here May 27

Four committees were appointed yesterday to welcome and entertain Louis Bromfield, noted author and agriculture authority, on May 27 when he is scheduled to speak at a public meeting in Allegany High School at 8 p. m., according to Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Henry W. Price, president of the Chamber of Commerce, was named chairman of the committee to receive Bromfield, who is expected to arrive early in the day and make a tour of Garrett County before he delivers his address in the city. Aiding Price on the committee will be C. P. Jolley, John D. Liebau and Harry J. Barton.

Will Inspect Farms

William M. Nace will head the committee to arrange for the Garrett County tour, on which Bromfield is expected to inspect farming conditions and soil conservation practices in the area. William A. Parr and Ralph McHenry, county agent, will work on the committee with Nace.

Arrangements for transportation of Bromfield and other guests of the Chamber of Commerce on the tour and to the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club, where dinner will be served at 6 p. m. will be handled by G. L. Johnson, chairman, George Schwarzenbach, James W. Beacham and R. E. Light. Guests at the dinner will include members of the Committee on Agriculture and directors of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

The dinner committee will be headed by C. P. Jolley who will be assisted by George M. Martin and Robert O. Neill. The dinner will be held as an entertainment feature for Bromfield with the guests scheduled to leave from the club for Allegany High School, Smith explained.

While the list of invitations to be mailed to special guests is not yet complete, Smith said Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; Edward Davis, chief of the State Soil Conservation program; Russell Lord, editor of "The Land" a monthly publication; and O. E. Fink, executive director of the Friends of the Land organization, which was founded by Bromfield, have already indicated that they will attend.

To Invite Governor

Governor William Preston Lane and Mayor Thomas S. Post will also receive invitations, committee members declared.

Arrangements for the affair which is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture and Membership Activities Committee were completed yesterday in the Chamber office.

The evening address in Allegany High will be open to the public and no charge will be made, committee members explained. Bromfield will speak on agriculture and soil conservation, a subject that he has become greatly interested in since acquiring a farm near the place of his birth in Ohio.

Smith said several out-of-state groups are planning to attend and added that 76 persons from Keyser, W. Va., have already indicated that they will be here for the evening address.

Expediter Will Aid Housing Projects

Warning against housing developments in areas unsuited for residential use, Charles C. Yost, Sr., locality housing expediter for Western Maryland, announced yesterday that his office in City Hall is prepared to give guidance to area communities in land planning and development.

Services of specialists from the New York regional office of the Office of the Housing Expediter may be secured on prior notice, he explained.

"There is always the danger that during these periods of rapid development, housing will spring up in areas never meant for residential use," Yost said. "My office is making a special effort to call attention to this before money has been invested, construction started and the foundation laid for future slums."

He pointed out that state enabling laws give communities the power to govern the trend and type of growth by creating and enforcing zoning ordinances.

The expediter listed important factors for community planning in land development as follows:

Helping builders locate good land, well situated and cheap enough for the low and moderately-priced housing which apparently will be in demand for years to come, while avoiding such undesirable features as noise, smoke and traffic.

Freeing suitable land from legal and financial obstacles such as delinquent taxes or special assessments, obscure titles, scattered ownerships, adverse zoning and inadequate facilities.

Expediting the planning, construction and financing of utilities, and providing additional community services for outlying new developments.
